RAISING A RAILROAD BRIDGE.

The raising of a bridge in Switzerland

Lifted Five Feet Without Interrupting upon the line of the International Rail way, from Paris to Vienna, has attracted considerable attention from the methods pursued. The occasion for the change was that the river crossed-the Rhine—had lost in the sectional area of the passage between the piers, about twenty-five per cent in thirteen years.

owing to the deposition of gravel and sediment, while the high water level had risen to such an extent as to pile floating debris six feet deep on the bridge floor in times of flood. The alterations included some reinforcements, beside the raising of the whole structure about five feet. The bridge was continuous over a centre pier, and had two main vertical posts there and four vertical end Africa. It will be published in Algiers posts. To each of these posts an inclinposts. To each of these posts an inclined strut was attached in a transverse vertical plane, presenting a surface for the top of a hydraulic jack to act upon. Eight special 100-ton jacks were used, with an eight-inch stroke and a working pressure of 400 atmospheres, the piston being nearly 0.7 in diameter. The fluid used was a mixture of water, alcohol and glycerine. Sixteen men operated the jacks, their movements being synchronized by a code of signals, designed to secure uniformity of action. The bridge was raised a foot or two by short lifts, followed up by thorough blocking, and then building under one course of cut-stone masonry. The total load was 546 tons, and the maximum load on a single jack was 88 tons. The bridge was raised in four stages during intervals between trains. The longest interval between trains was about two hours. The weight of trains was rigidly restricted during the time the bridge was undergoing repairs, and their speed was limited to three miles an hour in crossing the bridge. In addition, a special block system was organized upon that section of the line upon which the bridge is located, so that operations could be suspended, and the track restored five minutes before the arrival of a train at the site. - Locomotive Engineering. Electricity in Egypt. That the Arabs of Egypt are not quite up with the advancement of electrical science is seen by an amusing experience of Werner Von Siemens while traveling in that country. He, with several com-panions, climbed the great pyramid and there attempted some experiments on atmospheric electricity. His work had not progressed far before the Arabs ar rived at the conclusion that he was practicing sorcery, and became uneasy. Finally they insisted that the savants should leave the pyramid. As their entreaties and threats produced no effect, they proceeded to resort to force. "I placed myself then at the highest point of the pyramid," said Von Siemen.

'and charged my strongest Leyden jar at the moment when a chief of the band was about to seize my hand to try and pull me from the place I had chosen. At this critical moment I brought the rod of my condenser within a centimeter of his nose. The effect of the discharge was greater than anything that I could have expected of it. The son of the desert, whose nerves had never been put to such an ordeal, fell backwards as though he had been struck by lightning but uttering a yell he sprang up and, in an instant, vanished from our vicinity followed by all his companions."

Expansion of Girders. A writer on strains in girders, refer ring to the amount of movement of iron girders due to expansion and contraction under extreme variations of temperature, observes that for iron and steel the coefficient or rate of expansion is nearly 1 inch for 100 degrees F, or heat for every 100 feet in length. Thus a girder 60 feet in length will expand 6-10 inch for 100 degrees increase of tem perature and contract the same amount for 100 degrees decrease of temperature or a girder 75 feet long will vary 75-100 inch or & inch, for a variation of 100 de grees. He says: "In order to provid for all contingencies it is the general practice to allow for a vibration of 100 degrees F., or a movement equal to 1 inches for every 100 feet in length." girder 6 feet long will therefore require to have an allowance for movement in the moving end equal to 9-10 inch or inch, the other end being fixed. It is only necessary to put the rollers under one end of the girder, so that the move ment of the girder may be at the end only. -Iron Age, Raising Useful Insects. "Here is an interesting colony of insects," said an entomologist who was showing a writer over his country place in the suburbs of Washington. "You see," he explained, "a little bunch of eggs has been deposited on this stone wall. Nearly all of them are hatched already. The young insects that are newly out are yellow, while those a little older are red and black. Yes, they do look something like small spiders, but they are not such. "They are wheel bugs. They grow to be large predatory insects as big as the end of your thumbs. Caterpillars and various other garden pests are their chosen food. So, you observe, I encourage this colony. Any one of my neighbors would promptly destroy it, but I know better. People around here wonder how my trees and plants are always in such perfect condition. Here you have one of the reasons. The wheel bug is so called because of a mark on the thorax which looks like a wheel."— Washington Star.

Tame turkeys can be trained to hunt wild ones. A nightingale's song can be heard at a distance of a mile. When an ape does battle with one of its own kind or with man, it always aims to chew off the fingers of its opponent. A mole's home in the earth has always four or five cutlets. By means of one or anothey the inmate is generally able to elude any danger. Some ornithologists believe that the frigate bird would be equal to the task of flying around the world without once closing its wings in rest.

Los Angeles has a domestic cat that weighs thirty two pounds. It has twice given battle to a big tame racoon and in each encounter has come off victorious. A curious electrical fish resembling the sting ray of the Atlantic coast has been discovered in the Mediterranean. Its bony tail is luminous and can be distinctly seen 20 feet beneath the surface of the water. The monkfish is really exceedingly voracious. It will seize a cormorant by the wing and bite fishermen when being removed from the nets. Its rough skin was used for polishing wood and ivory and for covering sword hilts.

FLOWER AND TREE.

Tulips are indigenous to south Europe. The box elder is probably the best of the quick growing trees. The wallflower in floral language signifies filelity in misfortune. A brier rose, though not desirable for its flowers, which are single, spreads frag-rance all around through its foliage. Sweetbrier is one of the most delightful of common plants with which to decorate sitting rooms, for its fragrance, though very sweet, is pleasant. A Texas plant, with a grayish green leaf, resembling the left foot of an ox, is known in the Lone Star and adjoining states as the "Devil's Cattle." The largest tree in the world lies broken and petrified at the end of a defile in northwestern Nevada. The tree measures 666 feet in length and 60 feet in diameter at the Zinnias make a great show for very little money, though they are rather coarse compared to more tender plants. They are in bloom all summer if the faded blossoms are picked off.

There are Jeanne d'Arc hats, Or leans shoes and gloves, and the heroi maiden's suit of armor has been represented in a toilet of gray silk trimmed with steel spangles.
