CHAPTER-1. SHOWS WHO PHIL WAS, WHERE HE WA BORN, AND HOW HE LOST BOTH A WIF AND A FORTUNE BY NOT BEING FIGHTING MAN.

My story opens at a neat farm hous about eight miles from Carrick on Sui and within the good County of Tip perary. The scene is beautiful, almost romantic. A lofty range of hills here runs parallel to the Suir, abounding in fertile valleys and the greenest of lengthened slopes, ending often broken and precipitous peaks. At intervals are clumps of fine trees shading the cottage of some staunch farmer or country gentleman, for this region, with its mild climate and fertile soil, is in high favour with men of means, as well as the tenant farmer.

On one of these slopes lived Patrick Mullov. It was easy to see that the world had used him well. Not that Patrick's house made any great pretensions to architectural grandeur, on the his horse in the midst of a good-natured contrary it was of the plainest construction crowd when Kelly comes out and intition and material; but the thatched mates a wish to speak to him. roof shut in a cottage of ample dimen- ready grace he steps a few yards aside, sions, and the well stocked haggart and on enquiring the wishes of the fightred and thirty acres of the very best he is assaulted with a huge bludgeon soil : a soil which needed no draining for which he is totally unprepared.
