ON DANCING The Bishop of Manchester has just preached a sermon at Collyhurst, pointing out the dangers of dancing and music saloons to the youth of both sexes He was not prepared, however, to "talk such nonsense as to say that dancing was a damning sin, or that the music saloon might not be a place of lawful enjoyment. He danced when he was a young man, and he thanked God that there were places in which music and dancing might be enjoyed under "conditions of safety." The Bishop does not see why the working classes should not have these forms of enjoyment as the people should take these places and Deep offence has been given to the Orangemen of Ireland by the following passage from Mr. Gladstone's recent speech at St. James' Hall:-"The case of the Turk is this-and we can understand it by looking nearer home-we have first a difference of race; we have next a difference of religion; and that is not all-perhaps it is not the chief part; -we have a difference of race and religion complicated with a third difference more important still-that of unrestrained political ascendancy. Now, cendant class in a condition in which it is impossible for them to resist corruption and the abuses of corruption. am almost ashamed to call it like-but it bore a faint analogy, and I hope I shall not be understood to show it further-something like it in what once the position of the Orangeman in Ireland. The Orangeman of Ireland had a certain amount of difference of race, and also had a certain amount of difference of religion, and he had political ascendancy very considerably, different from that of the Turk, who is practically unrestrained by law. And yet in the case of Ireland, which a hunus who would say that if at that time there had been any tolerably cleanhanded power able to interfere and right the wrongs of Ireland it would have deserved the gratitude of man-THE CLAIMANT.

Since the imprisonment of the Tichborne Claimant in Dartmoor bits of evidence which, being put together, raise a strong presumption against the theory that he is an imposter, are being brought forward. Mr. E. K. Karslake, ex-M. P. for Colchester, and brother of the ex-Attorney-General, has always had a suspicion that justice was not done in the Tichborne case, and though not pre- charge brought against them in that paper pared to go so far as a belief in the of Dec. 26th, and also against a Church "Claimant," he has lately obtained evi- Warden, personally. For the benefit of dence, which he thinks very strong, those gentlemen I will here state that the showing that the crew of the Bella her passenger, Sir Roger, were rescued "Land Lubber," is not a Church Warden by the Osprey and taken to Melbourne. Two witnesses testifying to this fact are now on their way to England, and Mr. Karslake thinks that something may come out of it. He says he is by no means a partizan of the Claimantrather the contrary - and he has in no way meddled in the case since the Claimant's conviction, but no one would be columns of their paper. By publishing worthy to be called a man, certainly not this. Mr. Editor, you will oblige to be called an Englishman, if he did not do his best (little though that might be) to help an innocent man to get out of gaol, if it appeared the evidence obtained since the conviction offered a fair chance of this result.

Mr. Karslake gives letters which seem to prove almost undoubtedly that the Osprey after leaving the sinking Bella and as corroborative evidence says :-Mrs. Alexander, the wife of a gentleman residing at Dry Creek, in the Colony of Victoria, a lady of highly respectable connection, made a statutory declaration on January 17, 1872, which was as follows :- "That in the years 1847 and 1848 I was well acquainted with Roger Charles Tichborne in Eng-

Tichborne, and for family reasons he intended to be known in Australia as Castro; that the said Thomas Castro had been wrecked in the Bella; and I know from observation that in the year 1855 the said Castro was not tattooed. This declaration, says Mr. Karslake, was forwarded to the Right Hon. W.

AN EVANGELICAL CHURCHMAN. This is the extract:-

To my own mind, and (so far as I can judge) to the great mass of the laity, the question of gown or surplice in the pul-pit stands thus:—It is perfectly certain that the black gown is a legal preaching dress. I never yet met with a lawyer, worthy of thename, who had any doubt on that head. The unbroken usage of three hundred years, apart from other legal considerations, is conclusive on this point. It may well be, though this is open to grave doubt, and cannot be asserted without the decision of a competent tribunal, that it is also legal to preach in a surplice. In this state of things-one dress being confessedly and assuredly legal, the other being (at the very most) possibly legal-these practical questions arise: Ought a Bishop to use pressure to circumscribe the liberty depend upon it, when you combine of his clergy, plainly secured to them these three influences, you put the as- by law in this matter? And ought Evangelical clergymen gratuitously to surrender their liberty and to yield to Episcopal pressure herein? The law being clear on the side of the black gown. We had something like it—and yet I I hold that the clergyman is, on all moral grounds, bound to consider, not his diocesan's private likings or earnest requests, but the general good of his people, of the Church, and of Christ's cause. As often as an Evangelical clergyman lays aside the time-honored preaching dress and adopts the surplice. by so doing he unjustly reflects upon the practice of the Reformers, and of all his predecessors in the ministry during three hundred years-he rebukes his fathers and brethren in the Gospel who will stand by the academical dress, and though regulated and restrained by law, he puts it out of the power of a very and in that respect his case was totally large number (the great majority) of the oldest and therefore best of the Evangelical clergy ever to occupy his pulpit. Indeed, there are many of the Bishop may speak of the surplice as a thing "indifferent." Why, then, the earnestness with which he requests its adoption? The clergyman-when he first enters the pulpit, habited in white -may speak of it as a thing "indiffer-But many of the laity know too well how the Ritualists are demanding it as a thing not indifferent, and their consciences are wounded, and the cause of Christ suffers.

An Apology Demanded.

Bay du Vin, 30th Dec. DEAR SIR:- The members of the Church of England at Bay du Vin are entitled to an apology from the Editors of the Advocate, as there was a false and libellous writer in the Adrance who signed himself nor does he hold any office in the Church. The Church Wardens at Bay du Vin are Alexander Williston Sr., and John G. Williston. If the Editors of the Advocate value the good will of the people of Bay du Vin and the reputation of their journal, they had better inquire about the character of ignorant and senseless writers before they allow them the use of the
