examining that copy, as were the judges re. as six per cent, be made to read at a sident at the Capital, and that a great deal of inconvenience had resulted from the Government's failure to keep its promise in reference to the printing of the work.

He was always interested when listening to the speeches of the hon, gentleman from St. John, (Mr. Elder) who seemed to be the Gatling gun of the Government, but he thought the hon. gentleman had gone to far in the exercise of his power on the present occasion. He (Mr. Tweedie) was sorry about the St. John fire, but he never realized how bad it really was in its effects until he heard his hon. friend drawing the pathetic picture which made his tender-hearted friend, the Provincial Secretary, cry. He objected to that kind of thing for he looked upon it as inconsistent on the part of the hon. gentleman from St. John to be guilty of using undue "clerical influence." Joking aside, he admired the hon. gentlem an's speech, while he could not help feeling that he was prostituting his talents and great powers of oratory in an attempt to delude hon. members with the fallacies of argument which he placed before them. There was no great necessity for talking at any great length over the matter, for even the hon. gentleman knew there was no analagy between the printing of the Dominion Statutes and that of the consolidated laws of New Brunswick. The fact was that the Government made a mistake when they assured the House and country that they would have the laws printed in May. They knew, no doubt, at the time that it could not be done, yet they were willing to come to the House and pretend they could do it and go back, as usual, and keep pushing their work ahead of them. As they failed to keep their word, and inconvenienced the judges, legal profession and the public, it was not wrong or unfair for the House to express regret in reference to the matter, especially when there was no particular necessity for the pro-

TUESDAY, Sept. 4th

There was considerable discussion vesterday on several measures, none, however, on the bill providing for the expenses of the session, involving $7,340. The Secretary committed a bill relatprovisions to that introduced by the will be made for the Wimbledon Team. Secretary on Wednesday last. The portion relating to the issue of duplicate debentures and coupons to replace those lost by the fire, passed without question. The sections relating to the selling of railway debentures at not less than par and expenses of selling, having come up, Mr. Davidson objected, claiming that the Government had already power to issue the debentures under the Act of 1875, and it was only necessary that they should now be authorized to sell them and devote the proceeds to the purposes set apart for them, and Railway Subsidies Act. He moved an amendment to that effect.

the Davidson amendment, which was to strike out several sections of the Government bill, was open to the construction that the net proceeds of the sale of debentures were to be paid to the railway companies instead of the profit that might arise by reason of the premium, which the securities commanded, going to credit of Provincial treasury. The ed. bill as he (the Secretary), proposed to have it, if it passed, would provide in terms that the proceeds were to be paid to the Receiver General and become part of the ordinary revenues of the 3 o'clock. Messrs. Covert, Willis, Burns, Davidson and others, in opposition. said that the Government had passed a bill the other day which gave them most extraordinary powers. It provided for the issue of debentures to any amount and to run any length of time the Government pleased, while there Friday evening she was towed off by the was no restriction as to the dis- Relief. position that was to be made of the money. Now, after the bill had been defeated in the Upper House, the Government was willing to come back and seek the enactment of another bill, limiting the time the debentures would run to thirty years, and restricting the Oscar. He was fined $10 and compelled use of the proceeds to the payment of railway subsidies. Mr. Pickard thought the railways were entitled to five thousand dollars a mile, as provided by the act of '74; but of last week Mr. W. Tippet was ordained as the companies would do no more than fulfil the letter of the law, while they might fall short in complying with its spirit, there was nothing that ought to require the Province to forego the benefit of its own credit when it would do no wrong to any one. He thought it should be made clear that the debentures should only be sold to meet payments to which companies were actually entitled, and that debentures were to and Sunday last. ought to be looked upon in a common sense business-like way, and as all were agreed that it was well to give the Province the advantage of the credit, the bill, as proposed to be amended by the Secretary, should be accepted.

Mr. Tweedie thought the Government had a right to make money out of their credit but he deprecated the careless preparation of the former bill and this bill also which the Secretary prothe judge lately appointed for the Parish Court of Blissfield, Mr. Swim, said, he ber should renew at once. believed Mr. Davidson's amendment
