The Tarantula.

The day was excessively warm even for July. Crossing a Nevada desert was therefore anything but agreeable. Everything was parched—not a green blade or tree in sight—and the atmosphere danced and scintillated in waves and fiery tongues that seemed to want only a spark to produce one vast sea of flame. Our road skirts a broken and rugged range around which we must eventually find our way, while to our left is the wide, sandy plain bounded by barren and lofty mountains. Our motions are lethargic as it requires the most determined effort of the will to prevent the thirsty and half baked traveller from sinking down by the wayside. Near a rocky promontory which juts out to the road a party, who are in advance on the lookout for water, have halted over some object which seems to possess unusual interest. Can it be possibe that they have found a spring or pool in such a place. It does not seem possible, yet the least likelihood of such a contingency quickens the step of each thirsty traveller.

The finding of a ten pound nugget could not produce a greater commotion amongst our goldseeking crowd if we are to judge by appearances. There is much rushing about and they speedily settle into a solid ring around the central attraction. Is is evident that the thirst which had consumed them has been assuaged. As we approach the ring opens and we see nothing but a small dark object crawling leisurely over the hot sand. It is only a spider—a large spider to be sure—and we are about to turn away in disgust when the name "tarantula" arrests our attention as quickly as once did that of the rattlesnake. We have heard much of this dreaded reptile but till now have never seen him. He is an insignificant looking creature at the best. The body is probably two inches long and about the thickness of a man's thumb, but unlike the spider is thickest forward. When his many legs are extended the diameter of the circle covered by them would be from five to six inches or about the size of an ordinary saucer. Further, the body and limbs are covered with coarse, thick, black hair as a protection against the heat, we suppose. Its sole aim seems to be to get away at present. This is easier to plan than execute. His character is not such as to entitle him to respect or consideration. The wearied traveller who lies down to rest under the shade of a rock or friendly tree is approached by this sneaking "varmint" and should he stir in his sleep is bitten without warning or mercy. Again, the uninitiated are led to suppose from his leisurely movements and commonplace appearance that he is innocuous, thus falling an easy prey to his deadly venom. Should an antidote not be at hand, then the going down of the sun, which is now on the meridian will witness the last agonies of the victim of misplaced confidence or ill-timed repose as the case may be and will shed its last rays on a corpse distorted by intense suffering and bloated almost beyond recognition.

Bearing the above facts in mind the reader, will not be surprised to learn that the party which we have just joined are having revenge on the whole tarantula tribe by goading and torturing the unfortunate member whose unlucky star led him to travel at this particular time. It is evident that he is not partial to moisture especially in the shape of tobacco juice, but his taste is not consulted in the matter. We had often silently admired the readiness and precision with which the average western tobacco chewer was able to compose his features and adjust the elevation of his chin to any desired distance. Our admiration was not unmingled with awe when we learned by occular demonstration that the lightning movements of the swift were not always quick enough to secure him from a ducking in dark-hued saliva and now we were called on to publicly express our delight and approbation of an exhibition of this desirable accomplishment which we venture to say has hardly ever been paralelled. Whatever way he may turn the unfortunate reptile is met by breakers of tobacco juice which whirl him around, capsize him and carry him off in a rich, yellow undertow which would speedily be his shroud if he were not met by a counter current of greater volume. It is no use for him to squirm and still less to lie still. Can it be possible that there is no limit to the discharge, or are the men saturated with the weed and thus shedding—so to speak—their life's blood on behalf of their country? Is there no danger that the little fellow with turned up nose and capacious mouth will eventually liquify his entire body and squirt it through this expressive but much abused feature? We feel that he is only saved by the frequency with which he stops to swear, thus ensuring his corporeal safety at the expense—we much fear—of his spiritual. It is well for the reptile that he is not as sensitive to oaths as he is to tobacco juice. If this were so his sufferings would be terrible. Every member of his organization is cursed with a force and heartiness which is extremely ludicrous. That no part of him may escape he is carefully turned over and parts which are supposed to be particularly sensitive are cursed in detail. Under these troubles of body and spirit he soon grows faint. The readiness with which the stick is seized and ground between his fangs has sensibly abated. He grasps wildly at anything which may come in his way and at the end of half an hour is nerveless and unresisting. The tobacco has killed him with as much certainty and much more speedily that which he carried would his tormentors, which is saying something in favor of the higher bodily organization whatever may be said of the mind.

The western teamster has a hearty dislike to this "spider." His manner of living lays him subject to almost hourly attacks, eating, sitting and sleeping, as he does, on the ground. Should he be going for a doctor; were his dinner awaiting him, or a dozen of teams wanting to pass, he cannot be induced to forego the pleasure of tormenting his deadly enemy if the latter cross his path. Having sworn at him in the orthodox manner, made him stem a torrent of the juice of his favorite weed and tortured him in every conceivable way he finishes by killing him. He can now proceed on his way with an easy conscience and fully prepared to make up for lost time by extra exertion.

The fangs of the tarantula are under and towards the forepart of the body. When the reptile is quiescent they are folded by an orifice which must be the mouth and are not noticeable. When required for use they stand out instantaneously at an angle sufficient to seize whatever is desired. They seemed to be of a hard bony nature, and of a dark colour, but a wholesome dread of consequences prevented minute investigation.

Ayer's Hair Vigor,
FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR
TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and either of them incline it to shed prematurely.
AYER'S HAIR VIGOR by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; often renews the growth and always surely restores its color, when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thus brashy, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair regrows with lively expression; falling hair is checked and stablished; thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hair resume their original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions, diseases of the scalp ar impossible.
As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is praised for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

HALL'S SAFES ALWAYS VICTORIOUS—A HALL'S SAFE RED HOT FOR FORTY HOURS AND CONTENTS UNINJURED—BOOKS, MONEY AND PAPERS SAVED.

Office of Davis & Haden, Wh'sale Liquor Dealers, No. 9 Main-st., bet. First and Second, Louisville, Ky., Oct. 19, 1876.

Messrs. Halls Safe and Lock Co., Louisville, Ky.. Gentlemen,—The large number 13 Double Door Fire Proof Safe purchased from you in March, 1872, was in the disastrous fire, corner Eighth and Main streets, on the night of the 16th inst., when over a half million dollars of property was burned, and stood nobly one of the most severe tests possible, falling into the cellar with the walls of the building, and several hundred barrels of whiskey stored in the upper stories poured their contents into the cellar, keeping the safe literally boiling in burning whiskey for over forty hours. The bricks and stone were burned into ashes and lime, and it was the hottest fire ever known in Louisville. The safe was buried several feet under the bricks and ashes for two days, and after being dug out of the ruins was opened, and we are proud to say the books and papers were found uninjured, not even discolored or scorched. Several gold watches and some valuable jewellery were found untarnished.

We wish you to deliver, to-day, a duplicate of the safe to our new store, No. 9 Main street, and we will send you a check for the money. We want no other safe but a Halls. Yours truly,
DAVIS & HADEN.

A large lot of all sizes and kinds of these Standard Fire Proof Safes constantly on hand, at prices to suit the times.
