Prophetic Words.

The following pregnant words written by the Duke of Wellington from St. Peters. burg to Lord Bathurst. March 7, 1826, are certainly not inappropriate to the circumstances of the present moment: "I entertain no doubt that the consequence of war will be that all the European provinces of the Turkish Empire will be in insurrection and under Russiau influence. In what manner the Emperor of Russia is to use that influence, or how he is afterwards to establish order in these provinces, I don't know; nor do I believe any body here knows it better than I do. That is one of the arguments I have already used successfully, I believe with the Emperor of Russia. He talks of stopping at a particular point, and not taking a village for himself, nor increasing his influence or power. But I have told him he can fix the moment when, and the point at which, the first shot will be fired, but that he may as well talk of stopping the course of the Neva as of fixgoes to war."

An Important use for the "Great Eastern."

The owners of the Great Eastern are, it is said, considering the propriety of converting that magnificent vessel into a huge refrigerating chamber for the conveyance of American meat. A recent examination has disclosed the fact that, like the Great Britain-another of Brunel's ships-the hull is practically in as good condition as when first built, and the directors consider it would be wise to raise sufficient money to put new and improved engines and boilers into the vessel. They have been empowered to prepare a rough estimate of the cost of the new machinery; and in view of the fact that the vessel can even now steam as fast as any of the Atlantic liners, the trade in meat, which is being developed not only with the United States, but also with Brazil, promises to which the great vessel need never carry
