COING TO THE BAD

BY EDMUND YATES.

CHAPTER X .- AN UNEXPECTED APPA-RITION.

"You are not dreaming, doctor," she replied, in the old familiar tone, as sweet, but somewhat more melancholy than ever. "It is she whom you knew as Mrs. Moreton.' "Why, my dear, good creature," said the doctor; advancing and taking both her hands in his, "this is indeed a joyful surprise! We-we thought you were dead!" "I sometimes think it were better if I had been," said Kitty, sorrowfully. "Better-nonsense, nothing of the sort," said Dr. Travers. "But don't let us stay in this cold room; come at once to Lucy; you must have an immense amount to tell us, and she will be delighted to see you." He took her by the hand as he spoke and led her towards the dining room. "Let me go in first," he said, when they reached the door, "and break the news to my wife; she is so much attached to you, and we have talked over your fate so often, that your sudden presence might upset her."

"Lucy, dear," said he, entering the room, "the lady who desired to see me is an old friend, one to whom we are both tenderly attached, but whom for some time we have mourned as taken from us."

"Good heavens, Walter!" cried Mrs. Travers, "you must mean Mrs. Moreton?"

"I do indeed," said the doctor, "she is restored to us-she is here! And the next moment Kitty was in her friend's arms. "Now sit down at once," said the proceeded to carry into execution. doctor, placing her in an arm-chair close by the fire. "Have you dined? Will you have nothing to eat? No! well then you must have a glass of port wine. Nonsense, don't deny me; I insist. You know my way of old, if my patients don't take what I prescribe, I withdraw from the case. "They have been somewhat great." said Kitty, pressing her hand. "It has often struck me you must have thought it strange, considering the intimate terms which you permitted to exist between us, that I never spoke to you of my antecedents, or indeed of my actual condition of life, at the time I was a resident in your house. You knew not tions. I ought to have spoken then, but my tongue was tied. There is no such restraint upon me now, and I will tell you my story. "I was the only daughter of a small farmer in Surrey, a man who had been rich once, but had lost his means. He took pride in me and gave me an education above the average run of that given to girls in my position. When I was about the age of nineteen, I made the seemed in appearance and mannerswhom I had seen occasionally from my window passing across the fields. Gentlemen, -- The large number 13 Double Door

Fire Proof Safe purchased from you in March, 1872, was in the disastrous fire, corner Eighth and Main streets, on the night of the 16th inst., when over a half million dollars of property was burned, and stood nobly one of the most severe tests possible falling into the cellar with the walls of the build were burned into ashes and lime, and it was the hettest fire ever known in Louisville. The safe for two days, and after being dug out of the ruins was opened, and we are proud to say the books and papers were found uninjured, not even discolored or scorched. Several gold watches and some val-
