Therefore it was no great grief to her to have to leave England for five years in company any form of address -an odd thing with the man to whom she was to in itself, dont' you think?" be married—the man whom she 20 years old—and when she came these insipid forms—'Dear Mr. back with her husband after their Brown' and 'Dear Mrs. Smith,' and amusing exite in China she would so on. still be only about 25. Young now, it would seem, but still there must be considerable capacity for the enjoyment of life left to a woman of 25. The pair of lovers had been very happy all the afternoon. Graham Welwyn had been to luncheon with Mrs. and Miss Shirley. They lived in a charming detached villa at Sydenham, and they had also very nice little flat in Victoria street, which they occupied during the season and made use of for frequent runs up to town when it was not on. It was now early in autumn, and the place at Sydenham was delightful. Mrs. Shirley had Stepmothers are not always cruel.

Graham had lingered for nearly two hours. The lovers had been talking eveything over-and everything looked so roseate! She was delighted with the change to the entirely new country and surroundings, and in her romantic way was sometimes a little sorry that she did not even get seasick, so that she might be sacrificing something for him. Life now to her seemed all one long summer holiday, with youth forever at the prow, and love according to the American phrase.
