SHAKESPEARE PLAYED IN CHURCH :- A A Cape May despatch of 23rd instant, to the New York Herald says :-

The Methodist Church was crowded this evening at the commencement exercises of the Cape May High School. The attraction was the trial scene from the "Merchant of Venice." All but two of the cast were ladies. Cloaks made to represent the toga and Venetian head dresses formed two young men taking part were similarly attired. The scene was very well presented. The discipline of the Methodist Church forbids the visiting of play houses, and cause some trouble.

The people appreciated all this, as was manifested by the way they turned out to hear the band the production to-night, it is thought, may whenever it appeared. And, while the faithful attention to duty of every member contributed to the perfection of the organization, its efficiency largely depended on the capacity of its leader for his position, and he was glad to know that band-master Loudonn was held in high esteem by his associates in that capacity as well as in other respects; not only, indeed, by members of the band, but by the people of the town, as was demonstrated by the present gathering and its purpose-the Globe says :-Mr. Davis P. Howe, whose death is an nounced to-day, was born in Tipperary county, Ireland, nearly seventy-six years ago. He was a well-educated man, a graduate of Trinity College, Dublin. Over thirty years ago he was principal of the Grammar school at Chatham, and at the same time printed there, by the help of his sons, the Colonial Times, a newspaper which had quite a circulation. This paper he afterwards moved to Richibucto. He had reported in the House of Assembly, as did one of his sons after him. This son, Palmer, died at Ottawa. Two other sons-John and Joseph-became physicians in New York. The latter died about four years ago, while on his way to England from New York. Two daughters died unmarried of his two other daughters one was married to Mr. W. G. Morrison, of this city, who is now in New York, and the other was married to Mr. Wm. Morrison, son Sheriff Morrison, of Prince Edward Island These, too, are dead. Mrs. Howe died over thirty years ago. Wifeless and childless the old man had survived his better days, but kind friends here looked after him as far as this was possible; his roving propensities, his love to talk of what he knew of phrenology, made him known far and wide and everybody was kindly toler ant of him. His funeral will take place to-morrow morning, the service being at St Paul's church, and he will be, at his own request, interred alongside of his daughter.

In moving along the face of the wharf Maude's starboard quarter was penetrated by one of the numerous iron bolts which project from the face of that structure, and an ugly hole was made in it about a foot above the water-line. The aperture was neatly covered with a water tight patch of leather, as a temperary repair, and a start was made about 11.30. Anchors were cast for an hour off and near Bartibog Island, where lunch was renjoyed and visits interchanged between Learig and Maude's crews, Oriana being anchored little too far off to participate in the social-ity of the occasion. Proceeding, the yachts ran down-river within a mile of Oak Point where, meeting some other craft, including a barque in tow of the Str. St. Nicholas and a schooner, they shook out reefs and put about for the up river run. This was made in good time, with a falling wind, all arriving at the point of departure after enjoying a very pleasant outing, the weather of the day being as near perfection as possible from yachtsman's point of view, and the wind catchy enough to test the skill of those on the boats who could "reef, hand and steer." increasing business. Mr. Fry was the official stenographer Mesers Skinner and Fowler appeared for the plaintiffs and Messrs Currey and Lawlor for the defence.

Juo. E. O'Brien was the first witness. He testified that the Sisters were duly licensed and had made contracts for district No. 2 of which he was the secretary; at first under temporary license and, subsequently, under permanent license issued by the authority of the Board of Education of New Brunswick ; that on each of his visits, which were not unfrequent, he always found that the schools were conducted accordance with the school law, and he was not aware that religious instructions were given during the school hours. His evidence was a complete rebuttal of all the allegations in the plaintiffs' bill.

Court adjourned till Saturday. His Lordship Bishop Rogers was called on Saturday morning. His testimony with reference to the procuring of the Sisters as teachers was very lengthy and complete. He denied that he had, in any manner, influenced the trustees in the matter, but said that any action he had taken and any sanction he might had given was in deference to the wishes of the parishioners who wished to have Sisters who would teach under the law of New Branswick, having for 19 years borne the weight not only o taxes levied under the Common Schools Act but of salaries and expenses incurred in connection with the employment of the Sisters of the Notre Dame.

Father Barry's testimony was to the same effect, and shown that no elerical influence was used in regard to the employ. ment of the Sisters as teachers. He had in no manner, interfered with them in the fulfilment of their contract and that so far as he knew the schools were conducted in all respects according to law.

To day Samuel Gammon, one of the plaintiffs, was called and examined by Mr. Skinner. He testified to the measurement of the Grammar School building, and also as to having procured desks for the Convent On cross-examination by Mr. Lawlor he said that he did not know he was one of the plaintiffs, but after a little he came to the conclusion that he presumed he was, He had never visited the Grammar nor Convent buildings while school was operation, except on one occasion, when he went to the Grammar School with clothing for his child, and at that time he did not enter the class room.

Being questioned in detail respecting his knowledge as to the allegations expressed in the bill, he was obliged to say that he which the schools in the Grammar School J B Snowball, oats building were conducted, but knew absolutely nothing about the "Convent School." In short, he dida't seem to know anything although his testimony occupied nearly all Loggie, lobsters.

I have doubts in my mind as to whether those now attending the public schools could be accommodated in the Grammar building. In most districts enrolment increases during the whole year. The figures I spoke of were taken in the first month of the year. At the time of the employment of the Sisters the number of pupils to be taught was not too large for six teachers. The report read in court was asked of me by Mr. O'Brien. He urged me for it. So far as I know there has been no infraction of the school law by the Sisters.
