FROM THE OLD WORL! Glasgow, which owns its street cars, prints Scripture texts on the cheap tickets for workmen.

The dome of the palais de justice in Brussels is made of papier mache and weighs sixteen tons. With the exception of Belgium, whose debt has been incurred for internal improvements, every European national debt is in great part a war debt. Antwerp's exhibition was a financial success, after all; the shareholders have been repaid the amount they invested, with nineteen per cent. additional. There are fifty-five cities in England which cremate their garbage, and as they are not run by politicians they do really cremate something besides the taxes. square-edged and oval stick-pins and hatpins come in this pattern. Lizard skin is still a fashionable leather, and the proper and costly caper is to purchase such skins entire, afterwards devising useful and pretty articles to be made from them. The portrait craze has given an impetus to miniature rings and buttons; these last are particularly fashionable and effective when set in rhinestone and jet. Cameos are again fashionable; and the handsome old shell cameo brooches, in white and tan, with quaint designs of overgrown roses or classical heads, are especially effective worn with almost any costume in brown or tan.

Moon stones continue popular, and are seen in brooches, buckles, stickpins and rings. This stone is most artistic set in silver; and a recent feminine fad is to purchase an unset moonstone and have it mounted in some original design.
