HUNTING A LEGACY.

The 17th of June, 188-, was an important day for Henriette Bardonnel, milliner, at Rouen.

She was seated at about ten in the morning in front of her window, which faced on the Rue des Charrettes, busy shaping and trimming a superb bonnet, when Mme. Dufresnes, her employer, opened the door suddenly and, flourish ing a paper, burst into the room.

"Henriette! Henriette! Haven't you read it? Don't you know?" shouted she, out of breath. "Look see!" And she thrust the paper—the Petit Rouennaie—under her eyes, pointing out a notice on the fourth page as fol-

"Mme. Henriette Emilienne Bardon nel, daughter of Pierre Auguste Bardonnel, late piano tuner Rue de Grand Pont, at Rouen, is requested to send her address to M. Thiebault, lawyer, 53 Place du Vieux-Marche, Havre property.
"You must write the lawyer at once, my dear-at once." "Yes, I am going to, of course Mme. Dufresnes, right off," said Hen-The following evening, in reply to her letter, Mile. Bardonnel received word from M. Thiebault asking her to come at

To pay current expenses a check for fifty francs was inclosed. Decidedly things were looking well, and Mme. Dufresnes remarked upon it. "You were born with a silver spoon in your mouth, my dear. I have always said so. And M. Leonce—he, too, is very happy, is he not? Is he going with you to Havre?" M. Leonce, or Leonce Lecarpentier, was the son of a linen draper in the Quai aux Meules, a promising young bachelor of twenty-eight, blonde and hearty, but as gentle and timid as a Employed in his father's shop, for Papa Lecarpentier did not believe any more than was necessary in throwing his money in the gutter, Leonce could only indulge rarely his passion for the pretty little milliner. A bracelet or a gown on her hirthday or at New Year's, a few picnics on Sundays during the summer and a few parties occasionally, and that was all. Restrained, however, by paternal and business exigencies, Leonce had to let Henrietta take the journey alone from Rouen to Havre.

Tde lawyer's office was in the second storey of an old, dilapidated structure at the end of a courtyard. M. Thiebault. a thin little man, with bent figure, sharp eyes under his large copper-rimmed spectacles and a black velvet cap on his head, motioned to the young girl to take a seat on his left opposite the window. "Mile, Bardonnel, I suppose?"

"Yes, sir." "You have taken care to bring your certificate of birth, as I suggested?" "Here it is, sir."

The lawyer unfolded the paper and carefully read the statement. "Pierre Auguste Bardonnel-so far so ood. Correct! Your father left France about 1866, did he not, miss?"

"Yes, sir. I was then five years old We were going to meet him in New York. My mother has often told me the story. He wrote us three or four times, as nearly as I can remember. But we never received any further news from him-never. My mother has been dead six years, and I have no living relation except a cousin at Elbeuf."

"Your father, miss, died on January 22, 1879, in South America, leaving a twenty thousand piasters, or six hundred thousand francs, of which you are the sole heir. To enter into the possession of the whole of this fortune it will be necessary for you to go there in person in order that you may see my colleague, M. Quastella, who is the execu-

"Go way down there. But, monsieur, "We shall advance the necessary amount. Have no fear on that score."

"And when must I start?" "Let us see-the Eurydice-the Meuse -Friday, Saturday. Ah, here it is -the Iberie, for Buenos Ayres. You will sail next Monday. That's rather soon. You have just time to get back to Rouen and make your preparations. I shall expect you, then, mademoiselle, on Monday next without fail."

Twenty-five days after Henrietta Bardonnel, fortified with M. Thiebault's instructions and suggestions, and with the address of M. Guastella, Anibal Guastella, abogado, 182 Boliver street, in her pocket, landed at Buenos Ayres, and repaired, with her trunk, to the hotel, so favorably named De la Bonne Within an hour after Henriette's arrival, and before she had finished her dinner, all her neighbors at the table as well as the proprietor and three servants, who spoke French, were already informed of the motive and the object of their journey.

No Gaustella was at the number mentioned, not even an abogado in the building. Nor was he in any of the neighboring buildings. At No. 125 was a business agent named Carlos Figueras. They sought him, but el Senor Figueras knew no advocate Guastella. He was sure, even, that there was nobody of that name in the whole "There is a commission merchant Guastella, 38 San Martino street. You might go and see him."

Quickly they departed from this Guas-of what they asked him; had never been

For two days, escorted by her interpreter, she scoured the whole town visited all the abogados, lawyers, notaries, courtiers, business agents. But no Anibal Guastella, no Bardonnel property-nothing. M. Manoel Alvarez undertook to introduce her to the French consul. "I regret exceedingly, mademoiselle," whose existence he was ignorant.

In what anxiety, in what a horrible dilemma poor Henriette found herself!

replied this functionary to Henriette, "to dispel such an agreeable illusion, but if there had been here an unclaimed French property I should have been the first to know it, and there is none. You have been made the victim of a hoax. Henriette, when she returned to the hotel, followed the consul's advice by exploring her memory to find some one who had a personal interest in

And she found some one without great difficulty. It was Leonce's father, the old scamp of a papa, Lecarpenter. Not a doubt of it.

On her account Leonce had let slip several good matches, a Mlle. Coutois. of Lisieux, among others. Now they were scheming to make him marry Mlle. Hennequin, daughter of a merchant of the Rue St. Sever. "For how many sous did he buy the

A Circus Trick Exposed. An amusing incident recently occurred at a town in the south of France, during the visit of a circus. One of the chief attractions of the show was a troupe of performing dogs, and, after they had gone through various feats. their trainer announced that Azor, the most accomplished of them all, would favor the audience with a piano forte solo. Accordingly Azor mounted the chair and struck up the "Marseillaise." At this moment some one in the audi ence shouted "Rats!" and Azor made one bound in the direction of the cry This created great laughter, which was doubled when it was noticed that the piano went on playing, thus revealing the trick that had been perpe trated.
