We are not to look merely at the teaching of simple and Irdinary subjects, but also for the teaching of such subjects as will enable the people of this place to stand equally with the rest and best in the Province. By his own knowledge of the people of Chatham, he knew that there was a latent capability of high and noble things, which requires to l drawn out, and with the facilities we have at present, and still more, with those that more than hinted at, he was quite certain that Chatham would take its place with the best in the Province, that it would shine as a special star amongst the rest of the brilliant stars of the Province; and that we shall be proud to say that we are citizens of Chatham-that we have contributed to its elevation and to it prominence in the Province. [Applause. HON. L. J. TWEEDIE.

Hop. Mr. Tweedie said he never felt so much at home as he did now-in the company of so many clergymen [laughter] and he had never heard so many clergymen address an audience, when there was no collection taken up [laughter.] They must all be gratified with the addresses of the different speakers, and the large attendance to-night must also be gratifying to the Inspector and the General Superintendent. It was the largest audience that had ever attended such a meeting in Chatham. It showed the interest the people of the town felt in the subject of education and was evidence of the wisdom of the amalgamation of the districts. The incorporation of the town had caused a desire on the people's part for the greater efficiency of their schools. Referring to the subject of taxation he said the people of Chatham realised that their town was the largest on the North Shore and they had an ambition to see that their educational advantages were none in the province. He had no doubt that under the new order of things an effort would be made to attain this laudable end at an early date. He believed that no ratepayer of Chatham would wish that the town should be behind Fredericton or any other place in New Brunswick in this respect and no doubt we would have a High School building erected before long. He did not agree with the criticism of the Chief Superintendent that the teachers were too young. He thought their youth was no bar to their efficiency, or their capability to give value for their Some teachers who were not young were not efficient, because they did not possess the faculty for imparting knowledge. Like lawyers and other members of the professions, the young often develop el greater ability than the old, and the whole question of efficiency was involved in that of adaptability. There should greater encouragement in the way advancement and better pay for teachersboth male and female-who excel in their work. He regretted that the teaching profession seemed to be the only one which advancement in the way of remuneration was practically limited. As a member of the Board of Education he regretted also that the necessity of providing for other public services-demands for which constantly increased-prevented the Government from making the grants for teachers salaries larger. While pleased with the remarks of the Chief Superintendent in regard to Chatham and its educational affairs, he also approved of those in regard to the Schools in country districts, and fully appreciated the difficult ties and self-denial often experienced and in maintaining schools in the He cited the case of eleven settlers on the Renous river-a district which he had visited with the Inspectorwho were maintaining a school, as an example in point of praiseworthy and selfdenying effort and said if a similar burden were required to be borne by an equal number in the town districts, it was doubtful if it would be taken up in many instances. If he is not educated his chances for life are spoiled; he must, as a rule, remain in an inferior position, compared with him who is. He referred, in a comparative way, to the record, in the town and its affairs, for a long period, of those who were and those who were not educated, and said the educated men were those who had shaped town affairs, Men who are educated are not led by those who are not, and as it is in

A VERY PRETTY WEDDING took place at the "Pines," the home of the bride's mother, on Tuesday evening, Oct. 20th., at eight o'clock. The contracting parties were Miss May Flett, only daughter of Mrs. John Flett, and Mr. Robert Loggie, of Loggieville. Miss Ernest of Boston was maid of honor. Mr. Andrew Loggie, brother of the room, was groomsman. The bride looked very charming in white silk with orange blossoms and veil, and carried a boquet of white roses. The maid of honor wore French organdie, over pale blue silk, and carried a boquet of pink roses. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. William Aitken of St. James' Church, Newcastle. Father Richard of Rogersville honored the meeting with their presence. The latter gentleman was called to address the meeting, which he did in able and eloquent manner, which would make anyone proud of being a farmer if they see that the governments were waking up to the important duty of assisting the farmers, and he believed it was the intention of the Government to assist them in the future. He paid a high compliment to the people of great source of pleasure to be amongst them and especially on this occasion, when the taleuted and experienced Mr. Robertson was to give such valuable lessons in dairying. To say that the people were pleased to hear their former pastor addressing them would be putting it lightly. Mr. Dagle also addressed the meeting and gave some valuable information on buttermaking, after which the meeting closed by 50 a few well chosen remarks by the professor, whom we all hope to see again.

Alderman Nicol vs. the Truth

We suppose that as Mr. James Nicol is an alderman he ought to have little further notice in the way of correction, after publishing his letter of last Saturday in the World, over which he places the caption "D. G. Smith's Untruths." We published a letter for him in the ADVANCE of 15th inst., in which he charged that we mutilated a resolution he had moved in the 50 | Council, and intimated that we did so for the purpose of being unjust and unfair to him. We took no notice of the charge of 1 00 | mutilation, because even if the words which he claimed we had "chopped off" were in the resolution our criticism would still have held good. What Mr. Nicol wrote was : -

When you quote a resolution as having been introduced by me, leave out part of it and then comment on it in this mutilated condition, surely that is neither just nor fair. Dyes you can work wonders, and make the the part. The mutilation I complain of consists in old things look like new for this season's chopping off the following words in the resolution relating to the bond issue, viz., the words "if required by the town." If Mr. D. G. Smith, who is now charged with untruth, were guilty of making such a mendacious statement as the foregoing, he would deserve the contempt we feel for Ald. Nicol, who well knows that no such words as those he quotes were in his reso lution, or even anything like them. The resolution as he moved it, and afterwards mutilated it with a pencil is on the fyles of the Council and an examination of it will prove that it is Ald. Nicol who is guilty of untruth. He is not, however, the first person of his class who has resorted to personal recrimination and falsehood in an attempt to conceal from the public his mistakes in dealing with their interests. Alderman Nicol will have to learn that resort to untruth on his part when the ADVANCE criticises him in his official capacity, and unmerited personal abuse of the editor, will not have the effect he appears to reckon upon. His charge of untruth falls much more harmlessly upon us than the consequences of his bungling resolution would have done upon the people, but for another alderman's watchfulness. It was, doubtless, a realization of this aspect of the Neales for plaintiff, and C. J. Thomson for situation that so exasperated him and led him to falsify the record. He adds a new Paul T. Costain vs. Robert R. H Ellis. | item to his former record of mendacity by Tweedie & Bennett for pltff; Robert Murray | now asserting that he did not endeavor to induce the Council to vote $150 for a little bit of land five feet wide at one end and W. C. Winslow for pltff; Tweedie & Bennett | three at the other on Water street. Every body present at the Council heard him do so, and he can he safely left to their judg. One of the most ridiculous passages of the Alderman's last letter is in reference to Mr. Smith's position in the matter of the tank supplying the street watering cart. He seems to think it a grievance that Mr. Smith did not subordinate his house-supply AVOID of water to that for Mr. Nicol's cart. Mr. Nicol, representing other private individuals in the town, requested permission of Mr. Smith to use the "waste water" from the On application of defendant's attorney reservoir in question, and it was given to the trial of Davidson vs. Besmond was him. He, once or twice, afterwards, endeavored to have the house and garden supply interfered with, in the interest of ing, Adjourned till Friday morning for his cart, but failed, for Mr. Smith could not disease see that he was called upon to The case of Davidson vs. Desmond is a with the benefits of a water system suit of $110.
