A Dance that ended Badly.

NEWCASTLE, Sept. 19th. We are a fighting people. There was a dance at Masonic Hall last night. All went merry as a marriage bell until one Mose Gorman, of Nelson, caused a fight at 1 s.m. The fair sex got frightened, and left. All hands took part, assisted by special policeman Stewart. After twenty minutes of warfare even worse than that at the old school house on Wednesary evening, Moses was arrested: Mr. T. W. Butler induced Hen Honor, Mr. Justice Nevin, to go to the lockup at 3 a.m. and admit Gorman to bail. Mr. J. DeVeber Neales, of the "Justices" Civil Court" took upon himself to appear for the Crown. He "sassed" His Honor and was threatened with a seat in the cell

Gorman was admitted to bail. The parties retired to a place of refreshment and argued the points of law. Counse for Crown used abusive language to counsel for defence and said bad words. Counse for defence prepared for action, fired a broad side, missed and landed in the corner. Counsel for crown in the other corner, made apologies, which the other was induced to accept. Counsel for defence then put on his clothes. Counsel for crown waited around all day for something to turn up, and left for Ottawa at 11.30 p.m., where he is expected to receive the position of passenger, agent I. C. R.

Witness' attention is drawn to an entry in the book correspondence on the subject of cemetery of a letter purporting to have been mailed at St. Louis de Kent under date March 9th 1896, addressed to P. Q. Do you remember any circumstances connected with the entry of that letter (Objected to by Allan A. Davidson, Esq. counsel for defendant, but allowed.)

A. Mr. Fish was entering the registers in that book one day about the first of March and while entering that one to P Hennessy he remarked that there was on for Hennessy and he thought he would not put the registration notice card into the box as the letter looked heavy, and no doubt contained considerable money. "It" said he "Mr. Hennessy asks for any registered letters, tell him that there are none for him; I am going to be short in my accounts teday and will want some money, so I can quietly open this letter and hold it a day or two." That afternoon he called me over to his desk and said, "we will now see how much we are short in making up the post office report." He opened his drawer, took describes an entertainment distinctively out what cash there was in it and said "I want fourteen dollars and fifty cents to make up the amount; now, I must see how much money there is in that letter of Hennessy's from St. Louis." Q. What letter was that? (O bjected to b Mr. Davidson, but allowed). A. The letter from St. Louis. He the came to his desk, took up a pen handle and opened the letter. He counted the money over and said, "That's enough, that makes up the amount, now then, like a good boy, run down to the bank with this and get the receipt." I did so. When I came back from the bank I gave him the receipt and, in return, he gave me cigar and remarked, "you had better go out and have a run around town." thanked him for the cigar and went out,

He asked if any of the Hennessies had enquired about the letter. I said that they did not speak to me about it. The first time he said this was about two or three days after and the next time was two or three days after, that again, and I made the same reply, that they had not. "Well," he said. "let me know if you see any letters come from St. Louis for Hennessy." He said no more to me about the letter till one day Hennessy came in and spoke to Mr. Fish and said that there had been a registered letter sent to him from St. Louis de Kent and he had not received it. Mr. Fish said he would attend to it and make inquiries. Hennessy then went out and Mr. Fish came over to me and said "Hennessy is after that registered letter from St. Louis de Kent, how in the name of God am I going to fix it up? I have destroyed the envelope so that I cannot mucilage it up again." He asked me what he would do. I told him that it was none of my business and that it cut no ice wit me. Of the runnin' of the roundhouse Thro' his liftinint Mich:raising h-l about that letter." He said, But Blair's dilatory actions "When I opened it, I tore it badly," but He confissed he didn't like Throw him down, etc.

It was time, he thought, for firin' I said to him, "Anyone could tell that All the ould hands aff the road, So on every friend of Pether He said "Oh, I tell them that is the way A snug place could be bestowed, While a state of similarity In office and the like From Alnwick up to Ludlow Appeared to him and Mich. of coorse in the affinity Existin' 'twixt great minds Other min within the parthy To the same belaif inclined Mr. Hennessy said something but I did not | So they made a combination To let Blair and Laurier know That out of all the offices Every friend of Blair must go. Throw him down, etc.

The mithid they'd adopted Was to illivate three min As hids of all the parthy, Over Kerr as well as Tim, Over Snowball, or ould Pether, Over Winslow, Bob and Watt, Over Matthew, over Sandy, Or any of the lot. And what those three decided. As the big triumvirate, Must be swallowed widout wincin'. Or grumbelin', or prate; And as he'd been selicted As one of those three min He had called the prisint meetin', And the same would now begin. Throw him down, etc.

Q. Do you know, of your own knowledge, Bein' highly elevated of Mr. Fish being short in his post office Over all the prisint crew, To select the min for offices, And tell Laurier what to do, letters? (Objected to by Mr. Davidson, He could not be expected His position to demane I did not see the cash account and I don't By kapin' on as prisidint Of the Shiretown machane But before he left them to thimsilves To choose another boss For their little parish coterie And the Lib'rals did agree.

Who'd been blackguardin' Laurier

Helpin' Pether shout protiction And abuse Mackenzie's crew: But, now, the situation Entirely was changed. And the Tories being fired out Of coorse it was arranged That offices galore would come And pickin's widout ind And jobs of every sort and kind For every parthy friend. Throw him down, etc.

So the parthy was unanimous, And every mother's son Would fight beneath its banners And look out for number one. And he knew they'd be united. Harmonious and fair To the prisidintial chair.

Thin up rose Father Matthew, Wid clinched fist and blazin' eyes, And said-"Your matin's ain't called right! Your mithids I despise For you work in holes and corners Unbeknown to me and Jack. And you don't give proper notice. You're an underminin' pack !" Throw him down, etc. Thin up spoke truthful Timothy, And he says, "You're lyin' bad;

Here's DeVeber's bill for notices Of the matin's that we've had "-"Oh, you shut up!" says Matthew. For I'd have you just to know That your printin' bill ain't worth a cint To prove we've had a show.' Thin Timothy addressed the chair Exprissin' his surprise At Mat's attack on Pat, and said He must apologise; But Matthew interrupted him, And shouted loud and clear, And claimed it was irregular

Throw him down, etc. He'd like to know, right here, sirs, How, unbeknown to him, They'd managed things and niver said A word to better min,-Had made thimsilves committee min. A month or two ago, To parcel out the offices,

That Pat was in the chair

And not give Jack a show?

Whist! Like the cautious prairie wolf A crapin' on his prey Did Timothy reply to Mat, Beginnin' far away, And rather hinted at that same He wasn't bad himself.

It was against the sacred cause Of the parthy's greatest good: 'Gainst harmony and offices. And contracts, too, for wood That Matthew should assail the chair. And try to spread it round That Pat and other laiders had Untrue to them been found: Twould bring discridit on them all. Twas mane, and not fair play That Matthew should come down on Pat In such a nasty way. -At this Mat's eyes did blaze afresh As down his fist did whack. It's "nasty" is it that ye say? Begob ye'll take it back!

Throw him down, etc. No nasty man am I, ye wolf, And that I'll let ye know, And you've got to take that "nasty" back Or down you've got to go. At this the Mugs and Lib'rals raised A kind of timid shout. And Tim called Mat an "animal" Who should be fired out. At this up rose the stalwart form Of Matthew's Captain Jack. And wid his fist upon Tim's jaw He landed wid a shmack. But Tim raiched out as quick as cat, And wid his sure right paw

So thus far 'twas a draw.

Throw him down, etc. Thin Nid, who sat not far from Tim Rushed in at Johnny's rear And struck him wid a runnin' punch Behind the starboard ear: Thin up did jump an eager form, Jakasidy was he. Who mixed with Nid, and Jack, and Mat In a scrimmage rare to see, And W. J. and Joseyvoy, And others tumbled in And the way they punched, and gouged and yelled It was an awful sin : They had it rough and tumble. Like hyenas they did fight Round after round, twixt Jack and Tim. While shrieks did wake the night. Throw him down, etc.

Oh! the binches they were broken As if they were but eggs, And the table of the prisidint Lost two of its four legs And the glim it was extinguished And the crowd widout a light Did kick and scratch aich other My! but 'twas a lively fight. And thim Mugwumps, in a corner, Nivver tuk a hand at all; They just looked on delighted At the entertainin' brawl; But whin they were in darkness. 'Twas thin they got a fright List they'd be somewhat hurted In the miscellaneous fight. Throw him down, etc.

Fur the people's Jack kept noddin' Before the light wint out, At all of his contingent Not to middle in the bout, And the doctor was disgusted Whin Joseyvoy wint in, And the people's Bye knew he must stop If the doctor didn't grin; So whin Lider brought a lanthern And lighted up the place, There was blood or consternation On almost every face, And the only rale exciptions Were the counteninces calm Of the raycint importations Makin' up the Mugwump clan. Throw him down, etc.

Oh! 'twas moighty interestin' To look upon that flure, And to see the bits of clothing. And the little clots of gore, And to twig the rints and tatters In the garments of the pack— The Mitchellites and Lib'rels Who'd mingled in the scrap. Of coorse they all looked sheapish As aich man tuck his sate An glowered round as if to say D'ye think I'm aisy bate? And many of the company, Wid handkerchiefs and paws, Did wipe the blood that trickled from Their noses or their jaws. Throw him down, etc.

Sors! the spictacle was illigint, And we niver fought so hard Since Gilmour's hosts from Douglastown Mit those of Joe Cunard. And sticks and stones danced merrilly In every Chatham strate, And hids were broke, and eyes punched out As aich his man did bate. But we all know that enjoymint Must always have an ind, So the scrap up at the school house Died out wid the parthy's wind, And the mollifyin' influence Of the Mugwumps-and the light,-Put a damper on hostilities, And indid up the fight. Throw him down, etc.

But, even after all the row Was brought unto a close, Bowld Jack was far from mollified. Wid the scratch upon his nose, And he sid that all the Crocker crowd Jumped on him in the dark. And the bruises of their boots on him Left many an ugly mark; He'd give them all jue notice He'd pay them for their fun. And, if they would but come outside. He'd down them, one by one : But not a spalpeen of them Tuk Johnny's challenge up, But they sat in a dead silence. For aich man had had enough. Throw him down, etc.

Thin 'twas such a pleasint spictacle To hear from truthful Tim That he'd been shocked at what tuk place Before they doused the glim : And he begged that Pat would overlook The little row they'd had. Nor lave the chair on that account, Because it would look bad . For lots outside had heard the row, And were now forninst the dure, And all the town would know they'd met And wrangled as before. But Patrick kicked and seemed annoved And said he would propose-As all were such contentious min-The meetin' now should close Throw him down, etc.

Proceedin's were to be resumed Next Wednesday night at eight, And precautions would be taken
