But when after the funeral, the will came to be read, I found Charlie was down for £5000. That made me think it harder lines than ever that I should have had to come down in his place. The weather was atrociously cold; the March winds strong and blustering, with showers of sleet and snow, and I felt cold and miserable. At the end of the reading of the will I was making my way out to get back to the hotel, when some one said: "Mr. Wiburn, I believe?" looked around and saw a stiff. military-looking old boy regarding me with a smile through his spectacles. "Charlie," said he, "don't you remember me?" I thought to myself, "Oh, now I'm in for it Here's a nice mess-all through trying to serve Charlie. Just my bad luck." This feeling did not grow less when he said: "Milly wants to speak to you. She has been looking at you, and says she can hardly recognize you for her old playfellow." ("No wonder," thought. "It would be strange if she did.") She came up and shook hands
