

Remember these Directions for using Cottolene

For shortening never use more than two-thirds as much Cottolene as you would of lard. When frying with Cottolene, use it with the pan. Cottolene produces the best results when very hot, but as it thickens the cooking point much sooner than lard, care should be taken not to let it burn when hot enough. It will delicately brown off bread in half a minute. Follow these directions in using Cottolene and lard will never again be permitted in your kitchen or on your food. Cottolene is sold everywhere in tins with trade-marks—"Cottolene" and "the head in cotton-plant wreath" on every tin.

"Was for years a great sufferer from rheumatic affliction in my ankles, and at times was so bad that I could not walk. I tried every known remedy and treated with best physicians for years, but no permanent relief. Although my confidence in remedies was about exhausted, I was induced to try South American Rheumatic Cure. I purchased a bottle. The very first dose gave me relief, and after taking two bottles all pain had vanished and there has been no return of it. I do cheerfully recommend this great remedy." Sold by J. D. B. Mackenzie.

Arbor Day in Chatham.

Friday last was a gala day for the teachers and pupils of the Chatham schools, as well as an interesting holiday for a very large number of the townspeople. It was Arbor Day, the one holiday of the year usually devoted to improving school grounds and their surroundings, by tree-planting and kindred work, and Friday will be long remembered for the occasion on which there was a demonstration of a quality befitting the occasion.

The school rooms generally were tastefully decorated. In the Grammar School building the "White School" and others the rooms were trimmed with evergreens, trailing vines and hanging moss, and the windows were well filled with house plants. The blackboard surfaces were covered with colored crayon drawings appropriate to the occasion, consisting of plants, flowers, birds, insects, etc. Tree planting was continued through the forenoon until 12 o'clock by all the large boys, under the supervision of Dr. Cox, and assisted by a man hired for the occasion.

At eleven o'clock the rooms were opened to the public, and large numbers of ladies and gentlemen visited and inspected them. The dedication of the trees was begun about a quarter to twelve. At the Central or Grammar School all the pupils of the six departments marched in a solid body eight abreast, and halting in front of each tree as the name of the person to which it was to be dedicated according to the lady-teachers' programme, was pronounced by Dr. Cox, sang an appropriate verse.

A large number of visitors took part in this exercise, and one of them—Hon. L. J. Tweedie—addressed the children after the dedication of a tree to himself, thanking them and complimenting their appearance.

The trees for the Grammar and "White" School were all provided by the Highland Academy, excepting two ash-leaved, or white maples, which were given by His Worship Mayor Benson, who also gave four trees of the same kind to the Wellington Street School.

The trees for the other school grounds were furnished by the Board of Trustees. The trees at the Grammar School were dedicated to the following persons:—His Worship, Mayor Benson, Hon. Provincial Secretary Tweedie, Hon. Senator Snowball, Chief Supt. Inch, Rev. Jas. Rogers D.D., Bishop of Chatham, Rev. Dr. McKay, Rev. Dr. McLeod, Rev. Geo. Steel, Rev. Canon Forsyth, The Aldermen, The Board of Trustees, D. Ferguson, Esq., President of the Highland Society, Dr. Baxter, Pres. Nat. Hist. Association, Dr. Cox, Principal of the Grammar School, and Supt. of Town School, Miss McIntosh, Principal of Wellington Street School, Miss Mowat, Principal of the West End School.

The Sisters of the Convent School. Those at the West End school were dedicated to the following:—His Worship, Mayor Benson, Rev. L. J. Tweedie, Mr. Geo. Stirling, Secy School Trustees, Dr. Cox, Principal and Supt., The Board of Trustees, Mrs. Alex. Brown.

The graduating class of 1897. Trees were dedicated at the Wellington street school, as follows:—The Queen, Mayor Benson, Prov. Secretary Tweedie, Senator Snowball, Dr. Inch, Inspector Mercereau, Dr. Cox, Mr. Geo. Stirling, Sec. to School Board, Board of School Trustees, Lady members of School Board, Dr. Baxter, Pres. of Nat. Hist. Soc., Mr. McKenna, Mr. J. D. Creaghan, Board of Aldermen.

The Pres. Pupils of Wellington St. School. Clergymen of the town. Teachers of Wellington St. School. The teachers, to whom very great credit is due for the manner in which they worked to make not only the tree-planting, but the other parts of the programme a success were:—Dr. Philip Cox, Principal of the Grammar School and Supt. of Town School, Miss Loggie, Miss Cassidy, Miss Hamilton, Miss McDonald, Miss Morrison.

West End School. Miss Mowat, principal. Miss Flood, Miss Sutherland, Miss Curran, Miss Donovan.

not forgetting the teaching sisters of the Convent Schools, whose pupils excelled in blackboard work and gave evidence of careful elementary training during the afternoon at the Square.

In the afternoon Dr. Cox, with the assistance of some of the Trustees, and the larger boys of the Grammar School placed seats in semicircular form in the public Square south of the band stand and a little after half past two the pupils began to assemble. The children of each school marched in separately, accompanied by their teachers. They came from their respective buildings, marching in double file and subdivided in companies of ten each, a captain being in charge of each company. The order and discipline of all was quite marked, and the precision of the marching and preservation of distance were noticeable features.

The Grammar School pupils, each wearing a red badge—the captains having red sashes in addition to their badges—came first, soon followed by those of the West End school, whose color was blue; next came the little girls of the Convent School, with pink badges and, last, those of Wellington Street, with white, and numbering three hundred and sixty.

There were, in all, nearly nine hundred children, and when they were seated they presented a very interesting spectacle. All being in readiness, the programme of the afternoon was entered upon, each number being announced by Dr. Cox. "Arbor Day" was the first piece and it was sung by all, led by several of the teachers, including Miss Cassidy, who wielded the baton, Miss Wright, Miss McLean and others, not forgetting a general favorite, Mrs. M. Morris, who is an ex-teacher of the Wellington Street School and pleased her old pupils very much by appearing amongst the present teachers on this happy occasion.

Company 9, B. of the Wellington Street School was next called to the band stand and recited, "Hurrah for Canada!"

A beautifully worded original essay, on Flowers, by Miss Muriel Ellis was the next number. The young lady wore a plaid dress and Maydewers, and her effort was greeted with applause.

"The May Song" was next sung by all the pupils.

Company 1, C. represented by Lewis Salter and Richard Currie recited as a dialogue, "What do we plant when we plant the Tree?" young Salter having the "heavy part" in which he and his interrogator acquitted themselves creditably and deserved the applause they received.

Master Burton Flett read an essay prepared by himself on the subject of "The Rock, or Sugar Maple." Both its composition and reading did him credit. He was heartily applauded at the finish, and no effort of the afternoon better deserved approval and commendation.

Mr. J. L. Stewart, representing the Trustees, was next called upon by Dr. Cox, and he read a carefully prepared essay on the past and present of the Miramichi from an educational standpoint, with special reference to tree-planting and its lessons.

The next number was "My Own Canadian Home," which was sung by all.

Company 11, B. (Wellington St.) recited "What does he who plants a tree?" and were rewarded by hearty applause.

"A lesson in weighing" was recited very creditably by Miss Mary Beckwith, who was heartily applauded.

Frederick Loggie read an essay on the coniferous trees, and rather surprised his elders by gravely censuring the pulp industry.

"The Oak Song," by all the pupils, was well rendered.

"Old Ironsides" was prettily recited by Helen Fraser.

"Canada's Emblem" was also recited by Company 11, B. (girls) and "Autumn Verities" by Miss M. A. Galt, followed by "The Red, White and Blue," which was sung by all the pupils.

A short essay on "Arbor Day" by James Tait had some quiet humor in it, such as a reference to a gentleman who taught school in Chatham twenty years ago, followed by the remark, "That was before my time." He also remarked that a boy could get over a fence quicker than a cow, especially if the cow was after the boy.

The best recitation, both in its moral, and finished style of delivery was, "The Two Portraits," by Miss Mary Ryan, of the Convent School, who displayed good elocutionary powers and careful training. She drew the applause which greeted her fine effort.

This finished the regular programme connected with the schools, and addresses by citizens were next in order. Dr. Cox first called upon Rev. Dr. McKay, who said he would speak only a few words, for many reasons. He was pleased to be here and hoped to see many such gatherings in the future. He was proud to know that the schools of the Town were now all under one head, and that the children were receiving an education on a common basis, without friction and that humanizing and christianizing influences are carrying us along in the great work, free from prejudices. These conditions will have a good effect upon the rising generation when they meet in after life and differences which must necessarily have a separating influence, assert themselves. He was delighted with all he had seen and hoped God would bless them all. [Applause.]

Rev. Father Joyner was next called for. He referred to the variety of exercises they had witnessed and the successful manner in which all had acquitted themselves, and said it showed great care had been bestowed upon the children in training them, a fact which reflected credit on their teachers. The day's demonstration and exercises were not so much to illustrate the work done in the schools, as to celebrate Arbor Day. He then dwelt upon some of the thoughts associated with tree-planting and compared the growth of the tree with the development of body and mind. The school children of today were to grow and become the men and women who would form the society of the future, and it was well, therefore, that their training should be in good hands and that their minds should be cultivated and directed aright. [Applause and cheers.]

Rev. Joseph McCoy began his speech as Marc Anthony did his oration over dead Caesar, by saying, Friends! Romans! Countrymen! lend me your ears. I do not come to speak but to praise you. He said he was delighted with everything and too full for utterance [laughter]. He had heard so much that he could not take it all in. He was sure that every boy and girl here had planted a tree in the hearts of their elders, and the trustees had the fruits of love—love to everything, to God and each other—love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance. He prayed that God would bless them all. [Applause.]

Rev. Canon Forsyth began by saying Friends! Romans! Countrymen! lend me your tongues. He would like, in some way to be aided in expressing his great gratification at being here, especially as the worthy principal of the schools, Dr. Cox, [applause] as well as His Worship, Mayor Benson, had been school masters of his at College in Fredericton, and it was a pleasing coincidence that they were here together again, participating in this interesting and happy occasion. He was delighted with what he had heard and seen. Excellent care and ability were manifest in the training of the pupils, their music, essays and recitations, and much natural ability was evidently possessed by those who had entertained the audience. Much had been said about trees in the essays read and we should be thankful for the institution of Arbor Day and its commemoration in this way. There was something in tree-planting which appealed to the sentimental in our natures. From a utilitarian point of view more it should be done. He hoped that it would be practised more in the future than it had been in the past. He felt that he had done his share of it and he had not labored in vain. He hoped the work of tree-planting would extend among us. In this extraordinary year of May Majesty's reign trees will be planted to commemorate the event, and it will be a satisfaction to have it said hereafter that such and such a tree was planted in the 60th year of Queen Victoria's reign. There were trees in England known to be 3000 years old. He referred to historical trees, such as the Magna Charta Oak and William the Conqueror's Oak, and pointed out their commemorative value. There were, he said, cypress trees in Normandy, which were there in Julius Caesar's time. Referring to the duty of contentment with the lot in which God places us, Canon Forsyth briefly told the story of Jerubbaal, Abimelech and Jotham to impress that duty upon his young hearers. He said he hoped they would all grow up to be contented with their lot in the town of Chatham, and by and by to be its best citizens and foremost in the work of promoting its interests. [Applause.]

Rev. Geo. Steel said, "Great is the patience of this people!" He would not keep them two minutes. He was glad for the time they had had and that the schools of the Town were now all under one management, that Dr. Cox was their principal, and that he was surrounded by such a noble band of earnest teachers. He was pleased with the work they were doing, and hoped they would all have a year and a life of prosperity.

Hon. L. J. Tweedie, who was the last speaker, said he observed that the unmarried gentlemen who had spoken had made the longest speeches. That showed that they didn't know what pleased the children best. [laughter and applause.] It had been said that women could not hold their tongues, but he would like to know who had done all the talking this afternoon? [laughter.] He was sure that the little girls of to-day would be a great improvement on those who had preceded them, for they had held their tongues all the afternoon. There was "one thing" he could say for Chatham boys, and it was that they could cheer better than the men of other places, such as St. John and Fredericton could, and he wanted them to give three cheers for their painstaking principal, Dr. Cox. [Great cheering.] Now, that was very good, but to show how much better they could do, he wanted them to give three more for their lady teachers. [They were given with a will and "figured."] They deserved great credit for the good order they had manifested through the afternoon proceedings and the patience they had displayed. He hoped the education they were receiving would be turned to good account in after life. He thought that the schools would be the better and their usefulness enhanced if they taught not only theoretically but technically. The subject of technical education in the public schools was now being considered by the government and if the finances of the province would permit, something would be done in a practical way in that direction. There was no good reason why a boy should not learn how to be a carpenter or a blacksmith at the same time that he was learning other things which are to make him an intelligent and useful citizen. [Applause.] He believed only one of the trustees went to the "Tweedie School" to-day. Had another of them gone he might have found a picture of the "Orion" neatly executed on the black board, and if he had gone to the Wellington St. School he would have perhaps seen a picture of "The Catamaran." [laughter.] He would not intend the children longer and believed that when they returned to their school-rooms they would find some oranges, apples and candy. [great cheering.] He had to announce that the popular Mayor of the Town, who was to have addressed them had been summoned on a sick call, and that he was thereby prevented from doing so.

Three cheers were given for Mr. Tweedie, and God Save the Queen was sung, after which the children were marched to their school-rooms, where candy, oranges, apples &c., furnished by H.M. Provincial Secretary Tweedie awaited them.

The celebration of Arbor Day was one of which Chatham may well feel proud. It was the best ever held anywhere on the North Shore.

The teachers and pupils of the Wellington Street school desired to express their thanks to Mayor Benson for the trees presented to them by him, and to Secretary Stothart for superintending the tree planting on Friday.

It is a pity that a little more care was not taken in removing the trees furnished to the order of the Highland Society, Trustees, from the ground in the woods. No attempt appears to have been made to keep any of the original earth about them, while the roots were indifferently cut off. This carelessness will result in many of the trees that were planted dying.

The Trustees feel themselves under obligation to all citizens who assisted them in their work, especially to the managers of Masonic and Temperance Halls, who loaned them seats for the demonstration in the Public Square.

ALBERT'S THOMAS PHOSPHATE POWDER

(Registered)

IS THE SOLUBLE BASIC PHOSPHATE OF ENGLAND.

It is the cheapest and most profitable Phosphate Manure in the World!

At the German Government Experimental Station at Darmstadt, Professor Paul Wagner has tested it most thoroughly, and unhesitatingly pronounces it the best phosphoric fertilizer at his command.

He says: "If you desire to enrich the soil, to provide the soil with a store of phosphoric acid to serve for continuous cultivation for perennial fodder fields, meadows, vineyards, orchards, etc., there can be no phosphate more suitable than Thomas' Phosphate Powder."

In another place he says that clover gave a higher yield on ground that had this powder put in it than on ground upon which phosphate manures had been applied.

THE GO NCENTRATED HORTICULTURAL MANURES, For Fruiting, Gardening and House Work are the only absolutely pure and soluble manures in the Market.
