Chatham over the fact that an awakened public sentiment, that protests against the encouragement which violators of the Scott Act have had by reason of comparative non-prosecution of late, has led the town authorities to take the matter in hand and do what the inspector has failed to do. The sentiment in favor of an honest effort to suppress the traffic and money-making business for officials who pretend to be opposed to it, is growing, and the scenes of Dominion Day, when there was a "conspicuous absence" of suppressing effort, while young men and youths were almost openly supplied with
