discovered a method of treating eggs so that they will not spoil, and he asserts that in the future drinks in which eggs tured by artificial means so cleverly that it was difficult to tell them from the real article, but the discoverer of this remarkable method of preserving eggs alleges that he is the first man in the field to succeed. Nearly all of the New York districts serve egg phosphate during the summer months, and it oc-

Mode of Hatching and Rearing on a Great Poultry Estate.

Mr. William H. Pye of Long Island sends more ducks to the New York market this year than any other raiser.

There are more than 10,000 ducks on his place at Eastport, and their capacity for food is about two tons a day. "Talk about summer boarders," said Mr. Pye, referring to the occupation of several of his neighbors. "I guess my feathered boarders are harder than the other kind to keep fed. It keeps me carting grain and meal pretty steadily. We give them chopped up sweet corn for green food and a kind of water grass which grows here. I have a man who spends his whole time fishing, too, to provide a change of that sort for the ducks, but he doesn't get enough to feed many.

We give what fish we have to the ducklings. It is very good for them-makes

Last year Mr. Pye shipped 13,000 ducks to market. This year he has raised 19,000, and the hatching season, which begins about Feb. 1, was not over until the end of August. The batch-ing is done partly by means of incubators, of which Mr. Pye has a large number, and partly by hens, which have the

The ducks are all dry picked, and the task of removing the feathers is a laboricus one. It gives work to about 14 girls of the neighborhood for three days cents for each duck that they pick, and this system of "piecework" succeeds in stimulating the pickers' exertions so re markably that the feathers fly briskly all day long. Some girls are so experas to make $3 a day, and one small hinged, one can readily examine the nests from the feed or egg room. Should child has frequently earned from $1 to $1.50. The feathers are excellent for a hen wish to sit, take out one of the nest boxes, turn it end for end, thereby stuffing pillows and are gathered into placing the end that is closed up in the large bags and sold after the busy part roosting room, which prevents the other of the duck shipping season is over. hens from bothering or annoying her. Fig. The White Chinese Goose. 4 represents the roosts, two feet apart.

The White Chinese goose was introduced into England some years since by Alfred Whitikar and brought to this country by John Giles of Connecticut. It is of a spotless white, more swanlike than the brown variety, with a bright orange colored bill and a large orange colored knob at its base. It is a particularly beautiful bird, either in or out of the water, its neck long, slender son, and its period of incubation extends to five weeks. The geese are prolific layers, but their eggs are small for the size of the bird, being not more than half the size of those of the common goose. The spring goslings are easily reared and are a fair average quality for the table. The disparity in size between the sexes is considerable, often amounting to over one-third of their relative weights. The color, as the name indicates, is a pure, spotless white, which, contrasted with the yellow or orange colored bill and legs, gives quite a pleasing effect and the goose certainly deserves to rank in the first class of ornamental poultry. Large Eggs. It is a somewhat curious fact that the weight of eggs is materially larger in northern than in southern climates. Canadian eggs, for instance, are heavier than those shipped from the United States, and eggs in the northern states of this country are heavier than those from the south. TURKEY MANAGEMENT.

How to Secure the Best Price-Fattening. Dressing and Sorting. Success in securing a large number of little turkeys depends upon the winter and spring management. It is, however, one thing to raise a large flock and another to put it in the best shape for market. Many old and successful growers are not well up on this end of it. If their methods were improved and more care taken in fattening, dressing and sorting, as well as in packing them as the trade demands, much better prices would be received. Beginners who have succeeded fairly well in raising a flock are often all at sea when it comes to preparing them for market. Rhode Island turkeys are famous for their quality. Some of our readers may remember the appearance of those turkeys exhibited in the dressed poultry department of the Boston show. In the best markets in New York city, Providence, Newport and Boston they lead those from other sections. In the same markets they often bring 10 or 12 cents more than those from all other states except Connecticut. About New Year's a leading New York paper quoted Rhode Island turkeys at 28 cents and everything else in the turkey line at less than 17 cents. Many growers are interested to know the reason. It is not their fame in the past or because they are scarce that thy sell for the most; it is on account of their superior quality. Much of this high quality is due to the plump, compact breeding stock used and to the way it is managed; also to the care taken in growing and fattening the young turkeys. The pains taken in dressing and preparing them for shipment, however, probably does more than all else to give them their high standing.

flat bodied, long legged bird so it will sell with the best, but the plumpest, best shaped and most attractive bird in every way previous to killing may be so dressed that it must be classed with that which is inferior. Again, the handsomest young turkeys that are perfectly dressed if packed along with ill dressed ones or with tough old toms and hens must be classed with the latter and go for less than they respective ages. About two months from Turkeys which can be given full liberty from the first on a dry pasture lot and after a few weeks allowed to roam and roost wherever they choose thrive the best if they escape accident or enemies. Two turkey hen mothers and their broods will then generally join forces, apparently for mutual protection from hawks and other enemies. Where they cannot be given full liberty they should be given fresh grass pasturage daily and milk curd, corn gluten and wheat, as well as corn, to take the place of insects. Great pains should be taken that they are not overfed and that they are given as much liberty for exercise as is possible. The brood may be prevented from leaving a certain field by shingling the mother turkey so she cannot fly over the wall or fence. This, however, places her at the mercy of dogs.

Turkeys not only like northern flint corn best and fatten best on it, but it makes their flesh more tender, juicy and delicious. That given the little ones is coarsely ground and mixed with sweet or sour milk or made into bread that is moistened with milk. This is gradually mixed with cracked corn, which, when they are about 8 weeks old, is fed clear or mixed with sour milk. In the fall whole corn is given.

After June 1 those at full liberty are fed but twice daily. Resorts like Newport use hundreds of partly grown turkeys in July and August. From $1.75 to $2.25 is given for those weighing from 11/2 to 4 pounds each. They are sold to dealers who supin each week. These girls receive t ply clubs, hotels and wealthy private families These small turkeys are very lean and tender, and soon spoil or become discolored even if placed on ice; therefore only nearby raisers can handle this trade. If there is much risk or loss from disease before the turkeys can be matured. or if the number grown is so great as to overstock the place, it may be advisable to turn them off at this age. Possibly there are many other sec- REASONABLE PRICES. tions where small turkeys can be profitably marketed in this way. If your chickens, ducks and geese can be sold at greater profit for more money when partly grown than if kept until much larger and fed twice or three times as long, there may be possibilities for the enterprising turkey raiser in this direction. - Samuel Cushman in Farm Poul-
