—Laying Forest.
Mr. P. Anderson Graham, in Longman's Magazine, mentions the regrettable fact that all but the commonest wild flowers are disappearing from the English forest. Not only do the arches pluck them, but the vendors who go about the suburbs offering roots and flowers for sale carry them off wholesale. The primrose has in this way been practically cleared out of the forest, so has the one common Solomon's seal, and the foxglove and others are very nearly extinct. If the anemones, blue-bells and violets still survive, it is only owing to the fact that they grow in such astonishing numbers that the annuals carried away make no difference. The most obviously thriving and multiplying quadrupeds in the forest, Mr. Graham mentions, are the rabbit and the squirrel. Hares occasionally make their form in the heather or fern. The small carnivora are as plentiful as might be expected where vermin are protected as much as game. Stoats and weasels are much common. So far as the rarer mammals and poisons have not been tempted back to their old haunts. Foxes are occasionally to be seen. Mr. Buxton introduced a few pairs of badgers 10 or 12 years ago, and they have become established. Rats, mice, moles and "such small deer" have a happy time of it in the woods.

Sabbath Worship of the Shakers.
Sabbath worship is usually conducted at the public church, where visitors from the world are free to attend," writes Madeline S. Bridges of the Shakers of Mount Lebanon, N. Y., in The Ladies' Home Journal. "Four sisters and four brethren stand at the center of the room and form a double circle. The Shaker dance, so miscalled, is in reality a more or less stately march, in which all the members join—the brethren in a procession, two by two, followed by the sisterhood in like order. They move in step to the hymns they are singing, either slowly or quickly, as the measure of the time demands. The ritual is of the simplest—testimony of faith fervently uttered by those who feel impelled to utter a few earnest words of exhortation from the elders, the march and the singing of hymns. "Something curious in regard to these Shaker hymns is the fact that they are claimed to be largely inspirational—the music and lyrics are said to have been dictated, and frequently to those who are not musical. For instance, very often a tap will sound on the door of a musical sister and an unmusical sister will enter with an announcement of this operation. Now, a song has just come to me. Can you take the words and note it for me?"

Irish Relations.
A curious peculiarity of the Irish nature is the wide limits to which patriotism is extended. "Do you know Pat Meehan?" a peasant was asked. "Of course I do," was the answer. "Why, he's a near relative of mine. Hence he proposes for my sister Kate." When famine fighting was afloat in Ireland, it was a man's interest to "in-cass his followin'" by extending the number of his relatives by every possible device. Happily fighting is dead in Ireland, and a man has to need now to have behind him a long line of "ancestors," as Sir Boyle Roche would say, but of "relations," as was imperatively necessary when the "boys" were accustomed to "hoild distinction with sticks." "Sister, it is after he is dead that his relatives "come in handy" to the Irishman. They give him a "grand buryin'."

A Mean Insultation.
Two ministers were discussing the attendance of their people at worship. One was bemoaning the indifference of the people to the church, complaining bitterly of lack of attendance at nearly all the churches in the city. It mattered not how well the sermons were delivered—the people still declined to attend. "I venture to state," said one, "if I were to advertise that two monkeys would perform in my pulpit next Sunday evening the church would be crowded."
"Yes," replied the other reflectively, "Two would be better than one."

How Spain Paid Columbus.
A curious discovery has been made in the archives of the Spanish navy—the bills of payment of the crews who composed the caravels of Christopher Columbus. The sailors, according to their contract, were to be paid 13 francs a month, including their food. The captains of the three large caravels had each 80 francs a month. As for Columbus himself, who had the title of admiral, he was paid 1,000 francs a year.

No Chance to Get Old.
Mrs. Wicks—Why is old china so valuable?
Mrs. Ricks—On account of its rarity.
Mrs. Wicks—But I don't see why it should be so very rare.
Mrs. Ricks—Well, with my experience of servants, I must confess that a piece of china that lasts a month is a wonder to me.—Harper's Bazar.

A Drawback to Happiness.
"You didn't seem to enjoy the opera last night, Miss Gaily."
"No, I forgot to carry that elegant new fan auntie sent me from Paris."
Detroit Free Press.

The Tallest Landmark in the World.
The most important island in the Canary group is Tenerife, whose famous peak is known to navigators as one of the most imposing landmarks in the world. The mountain rises 12,182 feet above the sea, the peak having the form of a sugar loaf. Considering the fact that the island is itself a mountain, springing almost perpendicularly from the ocean, the bottom of which is six miles below, Tenerife is the loftiest peak in the world. Beside it Mont Blanc is a pygmy. Cotopaxi, Kinchinjunga and Mount Everest dwindle by comparison. While all the islands are volcanic and all contain evidences of very recent action, Tenerife is the only one which still continues in eruption. The summit of the mountain is a circular wall, inclosing a crater a mile in diameter and over 100 feet in depth. From the offing, and even from the seashore, the sides of Tenerife seem as though carved by hand, but the immense size of the mountain is in proportion to this crater, although it seems incredible to the looker on that at the mountain top there should be one of the largest craters in the world. The great crater of Tenerife has been quiescent ever since the island was rediscovered by Europeans early in the fifteenth century. In scores of places on the mountain side there are smaller craters which continually emit sulphurous steams and gases and occasionally throw out small quantities of lava.

Russia.
The lack of machinelike discipline in the Russian soldier is truly Asiatic, and so are the stagnation, patience, suffering and squalor of the people. In Russia they are drunk, instead of being gamblers and opium smokers as in China. The absence of a middle class and the gulf that takes its place are Asiatic conditions. In Russia no man except a member of the cabinet or a diplomat dares to discuss politics. Intellectual activity never goes beyond the affairs of village, family, farm or employment. Their most active interest is in religion, but they make of that such a mass of forms and mechanical or automatic practices that it is carried on without any more mental effort than the activity of a victim of St. Vitus' dance.

The Leaven of Progress.
The leaven of progress is not in the main any more than it is in the remotest corners of the system of government is to be threatened or altered, it must be by the 10,000,000 who reflect the European ideals in their dress and manners and who present fertile ground for the propagation of European reform. Russia's danger is from the top; the bottom is sordid.—Julian Ralph in Harper's Magazine.

Getting an Extra Ration.
Medical Officer (going his rounds)—Well, Murphy, how are you this morning?
Private M.—Much better, sir.
M. O.—Is your appetite good?
Private M.—Yes, sir.
M. O.—Are you getting enough to eat?
Private M.—No, sir.
M. O.—What would you like in addition to your present diet?
Private M.—Another pound of bread, sir.
M. O.—That I cannot give you, as the regulations do not admit of a soldier receiving a double ration of bread in one day.
Private M. (after a moment's hesitation)—Could you not let me have the extra pound and mark it down as bread put aside?
He got it.—London Telegraph.

Fatal Frivolity.
Jack and his two pretty cousins happened to be walking along in front of a drug store.
"I wonder," said Ethel, "if astronomically speaking, Uncle Henry's son is in the right sign for ice cream soda?"
"I'm afraid not," replied Gwendolen with her eye on the youth. "I don't see any signs of the sign yet."
Jack groaned and marched them fiercely past the drug store by way of punishment.

Morals and the Stage.
Mr. Albert Chevalier, the famous "eoster" impersonator, was once the recipient of a letter from a gentleman who had heard him sing his famous song, "My Old Dutch." The correspondent wrote that when he entered the theater that night he had intended to become divorced from his wife, owing to constant disagreements and troubles with her, but the song so affected him that he resolved to do nothing of the sort, but to make an effort toward a never and better life. Mr. Chevalier stated that the note evidently came from an educated man, and he had every belief in its genuineness.
When Harewood celebrated "Scarlet Letter" was being performed, a young man wrote a very impressive letter to the management. "I entered the theater last night," he said, "with a very great sin in contemplation. I need not go into details, but it will suffice to say that the deed I had in my mind would have ruined a home in this city. But when the play was over I saw only too clearly how terrible are the consequences of sin, and I thank God that I can still affirm that I have put it out of my mind forever."—London Standard.

the mammal training exhibit as the clever inventor of a most ingenious electric boat. An invitation to boys to bring to school products of their own ingenuity that they have collected, will result in an exhibition which in variety and quality will be a revelation to one who is not used to following them in these interests.
So general and so wholesome a tendency is too significant to be ignored, and yet one almost hesitates to meddle with it lest official recognition may rob it of its independence and spontaneity. With sympathy from the school, however, it may be directed and made more intelligent. Interest in nature, for instance, may help to fill profitably the long summer vacations.

The Milk in the Coconut.
Every boy knows the three eyes to be found in one of a coconut and many a boy has bored these eyes out, or one or two of them, with the small blade of a pocketknife so as to get at the milk in the coconut, which he has then drained into a cup, or drunk direct from the coconut itself. But there is a more fascinating way still of getting at the milk in the coconut.
By this other method the coconut is cracked at the other end from the eyes. The coconut is struck all around gently and repeatedly with a hammer, or a stone will do, at a distance of about one-third of the way down from the top, about where the arctic circle would be.

A continental gentle tapping will finally crack the shell of the nut all around; not in a line exactly on the circle perhaps, but pretty near to it. Sometimes it cracks shell and meat of a nut, too, so that both can be lifted together; sometimes it cracks out only a shell cap at the top, which is lifted off, and the cap of meat underneath is then cut out around with a knife.
And then there are you with the white lined coconut cup to drink from.

DISEASED LUNGS
CURED BY TAKING
AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.
"I contracted a severe cold, which settled on my lungs, and I did what is often done in such cases, neglected it. I then consulted a doctor, who found on examining me, that the upper part of the left lung was badly affected. The medicines he gave me did not seem to do any good, and I determined to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. After taking a few doses my trouble was relieved, and before I had finished the bottle I was cured."
