Tobogganing in 1850.

It is interesting to note in Scoble's 'Travels Through France and Italy' that when the novelist was making a revision in March, 1875, from Nice across the Maritime Alps to Turin he descended the Piedmontese slope of the Col di Tenda toward Cuneo on a toboggan.

'Having reached the top of the mountain,' he tells us in letter 38, 'we prepared for descending on the other side by the lake, which is an occasional ledge made of two pieces of wood, fixed up by the country (local guides) for the purpose. I did not much relish this kind of carriage, especially as the mountain was very steep and covered with such a thick fog that we could hardly see two or three yards before us. Nevertheless our guides were so confident and my companion, who had passed the same way on other occasions, so secure that I ventured to place myself on this machine, one of the coulants standing behind me and the other sitting before me as the conductor, with his feet padding in the snow, in order to moderate the velocity of its descent. Thus accommodated, we descended the mountain with such rapidity that in an hour we were at the foot. Here we waited two full hours for the mules which traveled with the servants by the common road.'

This is simply tobogganing used as a practical means of transit for travelers in the Alps.—Chambers' Journal.

Given as a Medicine. A rebuke emphasized by a kindness is apt to be remembered. One day an officer walked into the office of one of the well known business men of the west.

'What do you want here?' he said to the officer.

'I've come to attach the wages of one of your men for a debt.'

'Who is the man?'

'The officer named him, and he was at once summoned to his employer's office.

'How long have you been in debt?' was the first question asked.

'Been behindhand for 20 years. I can't seem to catch up,' said the man.

'But you have a good salary.'

'I know it, but I can't get out of debt.'

'You must get out, or you must leave here. How much do you owe?'

'The whole was not much less than $1,000, but the employer immediately wrote his check for the amount, and said, as he handed it to the man:

'This will pay all your bills. If I hear of your running in debt again, you'll have to go.'

It was what the doctors call 'heroic treatment,' and it not only astonished the man, but 'revolutionized' him. He settled with his creditors, and then, by carefulness, kept out of debt.

Better than a genius for making money is the habit of paying as you go.—Youth's Companion.

Sailing on Fresh Water. A Pittsburg who at one time served an enlistment on the United States steamship Michigan, vessel of the United States navy which is stationed on the great lakes, tells a story of Charles V. Gridley, captain of the flagship Olympia, which led the fighting at Manila.

Young Gridley, shortly after graduation at the Naval Academy, was ordered to the Michigan for duty. A few days after he had reported the commander ordered the usual boat drill, and the crew went through the process of abandoning the ship. When the cutter of which Gridley was in command had gone a mile or two away from the vessel, the young officer, who had never before sailed on fresh water, inquired sharply for the water cask, which he discovered had not been placed in the boat.

'What do you fellows do for drinking water when you are called away from the ship?' he asked the coxswain with some asperity.

'Sure, sir,' replied that worthy, 'we generally dip over the side.'

Gridley had nothing more to say, but the joke has been in circulation ever since.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Battleship and Cruiser. The difference between a battleship and an armored cruiser is technical, and experts have stumbled over the matter. A battleship is supposed to have heavier guns and armor and to be better fitted to withstand hard knocks from an opposing force. But this does not always hold good, as may be seen in the case of the Maine as compared with the Brooklyn. The Maine was a battleship, but she was not so large nor so heavily armored as the armored cruiser Brooklyn. On one point there seems to be no dispute, and that is the fact that the cruisers are faster than the battleships, and it is conceded also that in most instances the battleships are better protected.

A Weak Brother. Penn had a very strong aversion to tobacco. Once he came unexpectedly upon some of the friends who were enjoying the fragrant weed, but out of respect for their great leader they hid their pipes, which, however, still continued to emit smoke. Perceiving this, the governor said pleasantly, 'Well, friends, I am glad to see that you are at last ashamed of your old practice.'

'Not entirely so,' replied one of the brethren, 'but we preferred laying down our pipes to the danger of offending a weaker brother.'—London Tit-Bits.

A Change of Opinion. 'There's a good deal of human nature in a puppy,' remarked the philosopher, calmly watching Fido tearing his best hat to pieces. 'Almost as destructive as one of my little nephews.'

Mrs. Boncener—Why, professor, don't you see he's got your hat!

The Professor—That's so! I thought it was one of the boarders' hats. Take that, you whelp!—Boston Transcript.

Applause in Spanish Theaters. If when traveling in Portugal or Spain you go to the theater and wish to applaud any performer, be very careful how you do it. Do not hit the ground with your stick, or kick against the woodwork of your box, or stamp with your feet. A few years ago I was in Lisbon and went one night to one of the theaters to see a zarzuela, as the comic operas imported from Spain are called. I was with a party of friends in a stage box. Now, in Portugal such a box is, as the name implies, on the stage itself, and you could not be near to the performers. Needless to say, you are too near for comfort. The light blinds you, the dust and powder cover your clothes, the defects of the performance are glaring.

On the night to which I specially refer a woman came upon the stage and sang a ballad with much taste and feeling. When she had finished, some of my party applauded, and I knocked on the floor of the box with my stick. The woman did not accept an encore, and as she went off she cast a reproachful glance at me. 'It was not so bad as all that,' remarked one of my friends, a good judge of music. 'So I thought,' I replied. 'Then why did you condemn it?' he asked, and then began to laugh.

'I see you do not know the ways of the country,' he went on. 'When we find a thing very bad indeed, we do as you have been doing.' I felt very foolish.—Today.

Thumbstaws. William Chastreux, the Scotch divine who for 14 years served William III as confidential secretary and adviser in chief, had been implicated in the Eye House plot, a conspiracy to assassinate Charles II and place Monmouth on the throne. He was put to the excruciating torture of the thumbstaws or thumb-

Spaniards, having saved no provisions, were forced to buy a few wretched horses, 'which they killed and did eat, and some small quantity of butter that the common people brought also to sell.'

Has No Friends. Village Constable (showing his city relative around the hamlet)—That quiet, harmless looking man on the opposite side of the street is a member of the church and one of the most public spirited, kind hearted and charitable men in the whole community, and yet he is the hardest hated and most industriously despised person in the village. City Cousin—How does that come about?

Village Cousin—Why, you see, he has kept a diary continuously since 1871, conscientiously and methodically jotting down from time to time all the important and unimportant happenings, episodes and incidents in our village life, marriages, births, the state of the weather, condition of the crops, what so-and-so paid for such and such a house, and so on and so forth, including the gist of everybody's political utterances. And whenever the revered oldest inhabitant says that this is the oldest, hottest, wisest or driest season in ten years, or a lady makes an assertion regarding her age, or some one declares he paid a certain sum for his property, or a local politician cries out that he has always worked for the success of some particular party and never scratched his ticket, the man with the diary pulls out his little book and calmly calls them down, as if it was his bounden duty to do so.

Occasionally we come upon a good anecdote as when the colonel remarks: 'This pentateuch (or psalter) was dedicated by N. N., in the year —, to the synagogue —. It shall not be sold, it shall not be removed, it shall not be pawned. Cursed be he who shall let it, cursed be he that removes it,' etc.—London Globe.

The Only Time to Do. There was a time when the Illinois Central railroad was being constantly snood. This story illustrating the avidity of capitalists is related by the Louisville Courier-Journal. Emily A. Storrs, the famous Chicago lawyer, was approached by an old man with a note one day. The note had been given among the effects of a deceased relative.

'What's the nature of the note?' asked Mr. Storrs.

'I don't know, sir,' replied the old fellow.

'Have you any idea who wrote it?' asked Mr. Storrs.

'No, sir,' answered the note bearer. 'Well, do you know anything about the note at all?' asked Mr. Storrs.

'Nothing at all, sir,' answered the old man.

'Well,' remarked Mr. Storrs, 'I guess the only thing I can do in the premises is to sue the Illinois Central railroad.'

Saluting the President. Decidedly, this matter of the Spanish war is improving our manners. I think that once we have grown used to hearing national airs every evening at the theater and to shouting while they are playing, we shall keep up the custom war or no war, as we ought. I have observed, too, of late that when the president drives out 20 men lift their hats to him where five performed that act of courtesy three months ago. I have heard so many foreigners complain of our lack of deference to the chief executive, because we do not salute him when he appears. It is hard to make them understand that our seeming indifference is merely a way we have, and I hope it's a way we aren't going to have much longer.

Extreme Caution. 'I caught myself just in time this morning,' exclaimed Mr. Meekton. 'I came very near annoying Henrietta quite severely.'

'By some remark?'

'No, I started to whistle 'The Girl I Left Behind Me,' but stopped before she could recognize the tune, then?'

'She dislikes the tune, then?'

'I don't know that she dislikes the tune. But I am sure Henrietta would resent any insinuation that the girl was not away in the lead, no matter what the occasion might be.'

A Sure Sham. Mrs. Jenkins—I see Mrs. Hoeting is going to have 'King Lear' at her next private theatricals.

Mrs. Newrick (furious with envy)—Is she, the affected thing? Do you know, I don't believe he's a real king at all.—London Fun.

Spanish Knights Lusted by the Irish. The Century has an article on 'The Spanish Armada,' written by William Frederic Tilton. An introduction is furnished by Captain Alfred T. Mahan. Mr. Tilton says:

The brave Venetian Trinidad Valencera, having sprung a desperate leak, ran for the Irish coast, and soon found herself off O'Dogherty's country, perhaps in Lough Swilly. Part of the crew swam ashore; others huddled into an old leaky boat. A native rowed out toward them, and being promised a bagful of dracats and jewels helped land those in the leaky boat, while another Irishman, bent on richer spoil and heedless of the cries for help, rowed straight for the wreck, which went down while he was looting in the hold. No sooner had the Spaniards got ashore than 'wild people,' and even the queen's soldiers, fell upon them, robbing them of their 'money, gold buttons, rapiers and apparel' and slaughtering a number of them in cold blood. But one of the O'Donnella came to the rescue, had a great fire built for some of the officers and seemed to 'pity their case, especially O'Donnell's, with talk how he was lodged in the cabin of a fellow who sold ale and aqua vitae and was ruffing it in a stolen 'red cloak with buttons of gold.' In the night he robbed his guest of 300 dracats and the other officers were 'heat out barrels' heads and fill them with plate, money and jewels.' The
