Let the fishery go on and if it is found to threaten the supply seriously let the season be shortened, say 5 days the first year, 5 more the next, and so essary. All restrictions as to harbors and shortening the seasons, etc. should be general and not applied to any particular part of the coast, but all engaged in the industry should be treated alike.

HON. J. B. SNOWBALL urged that liceuses should be made to cover defined areas, so as to prevent a practice prevailing in certain places where if a fisherman heard of his neighbor having a good catch he would take up his traps and put them down outside of his line, thus spoiling the fishing for both.

This closed the inquiry and Chairman Prince made a brief speech, in which he referred to its satisfactory character, thanking the mayer and aldermen for their court esy in giving them the Town Council Chamber for the sessions held, and those who had attended and given information, for doing so.

DESTROYING A LOBSTER FISHERY :- "The French lobster packers on the treaty shore, save the St. John's (Nfld.) Herald, "have done an enormous business during the past seasos At St. John's Island, one Frenchman has packed and shipped 2,500 cases. Newfoundlanders who are fishing off the treaty shore have dene very poorly. This is easily accounted for. The Frenchmen recognize no restrictions and can fish at every season, while the Newfoundlanders have to close down their factories during the close season. The language of the treaty of Utrecht does not give the Frenchmen the right to build factories or pack lobsters on the treaty shore, but they do it just the same, and, having no rules or regulations to fear, they work in all seasons.

BURNED TO DEATH :- On Friday evening last about 7 o'elock Mr. David Gay of l'abusintac discovered that his barn was on fire, and had been burning so long when first observed that there was no hope of saving it. Mr. Gay, who was nearly 75 years of age directed his wife to make an effort to get the cattle out while he would try and save the horses. When the couple entered the building it was full of suffocating smoke, which it is supposed soon overcame Mr. Gay, who had gone too far be fore he realised the great danger he was in At all events he never came out, but perished in the flames. The barn and all its contents were consumed. Mr. Gay's remains were found between the bodies of the two horses that were in the barn. Miss Biggart in Montreal.

Editor of the Advance:

DEAR SIR:-Your readers will, no doubt, remember the shabby treatment accorded to Miss Biggart when she visited Chatham a on until it improved again. He would cut | short time since and the nasty attack made weil known to be the outcome of the spleen of certain crusty old bachelors, who were not appreciated by the lady as fully as their opinion of their own literary attainments had led them to expect. We all remember how fulsome they were in their praise of her first readings and how they soured on the second. What happened "between the acts?" We also know how shabbily they treated her by throwing upon the mayor duties which they themselves should have performed in connection with the entertainments which they encouraged Miss Biggart to give for the benefit of the library fund. Burns wrote of "man's inhumanity to man. What shall we say of man's inhumanity to woman? Perhaps, had Miss Biggart, been a man instead of a woman and a stranger, she would not have been as badly treated as she was in the paper referred to, in the interest of those who so largly influence it. Miss Biggart's friends here are glad to observe that she was better appreciated by a Montreal audience and the Montreal Star, the most widely circulated and most influencial paper in Canada, than by the "old crusties" and the World of Chatham. This is what the Star of 19th inst. says of her Solomen Garland reading, for which the World abused her:-

"An interesting entertainment was given last night in Karn Music Hall by Miss Mabelle Biggart, writer and dramatist, New York. A brief preliminary concert was given, participated in by Miss Mabel Barker and Messrs. Fred A. Hilton, E. Morris and

"The principal part of the entertainment was the dramatized reading from "Solomon Garland," by Miss Biggart. The scene of this novel, written by Miss Biggart, is laid n Newfoundland, among the fisher folk. A true picture of life in the Ancient Colony s given in an easy, natural and attractive manner. Miss Biggart read lengthy extracts from her novel. The matter was good and the talented lady's presentation it to the andience was eminently arcistic. She has a most attractive stage appearance. Her voice is sweet and well modulated, and her gestures appropriate."

Great Storm.

The gale which prevailed on Saturday night and Sunday last, accompanied by the highest tide known for years on the Atlantic coast of the United States and Canada, caused much loss of life and damage to shipping and other property. The record of disasters on the north shore of New Brunswick is not a very serious one, because the navigation season had practically closed and Booth Co. has not formed a trust. It nearly all kinds of boats and vessels were in true that the company of which I am winter quarters, so that most of the losses were caused by the flooding of warehouses Chatham and vicinity there are few losses to report. The public wharf at Douglastown was submerged and its top lifted and somewhat displaced so that some repairs will be necessary and the top of the Bushville wharf was also damaged. The Dominion building basement was flooded to a depth of six or eight inches. Nearly every wharf in town, save that of Mr. Snowball was submerged.

Messrs. Barker, of the White Store, Newcastle, lost about $500 worth of goods which was stored in the cellar of the Creaghan annex building in that town.

It is known that about forty persons perished in and about Boston harbor. Reports from other places in some cases state that the crews of this or that vessel escaped. Many, however, state that the fate of the crew is unknown. Many survivors have turned up at life-saving stations and coming fashionable and beautiful color and made to vessels have brought a few sailors from wrecks. The Purchase of Fish Depots Merely a Shrewd Business Transaction.

CHICAGO, Nov. 18 .- While President W . Booth, of the Chicago Fish Trust, will not admit that the company that he is the head of, is in any sense of the word combination, yet he said to a Journal repre sentative yesterday that he and associates are buying up all the fish packing houses that they can. So far th trust has not made much headway in the state of Wisconsin. However, negotiation are now proceeding to scoop in all the packing houses and fish establishments in Mil waukee and other fishing centres of the state. Mr. Booth made no bones of stating this fact and when he did there was a light in his eye which seemed to say, "We are on the right side of the fence already."

After a formal greeting the newspape man asked Mr. Booth : "Who are the fish merchants associated with the trust in the state of Wisconsin

"That is where you make a mistake," said the Chicago millionaire. "The president has been buying out a great many businesses in many parts of the country. and cellars within reach of the tide. In | It would be practicably impossible to form a fish trust, however, because every man who is so disposed can go to the lakes or to the sea and fish and sell the product of his labors to the best advantage."

"Well, Mr. Booth," asked the reporter, "what object has the Booth Packing Company in gathering in all the great fish houses in the country and why is it still the lookout for more?"

"For the last four years the A. Booth Company saw the necessity of reducing expenses in the cost of catching fish and placing them on the markets in the various parts of the country," said Mr. Booth, "and the only way this could be done was by controlling the output to a greater or less extent and supplying the markets. Befor the new company was formed four months ago the Booth Packing Company had thirty or ferty branch houses in various parcs of the country. At that time there was no talk as to a trust, vet we operated as many houses as I have indicated. "The time was ripe just prior to four months ago to buy out other fish establishments and what we did then was merely to extend the ramifications of our business. In other words it became larger by the incorporation of new branch houses.

The Corbett-Sharkey Fight.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.-The big money bet on Corbett and Sharkey was on before the crowd gathered at the ringside. Betting still went on when Corbett and Sharkey stepped over the ropes, but it was light in volume, and except for a sudden spasm of enthusiasm, that for a moment caused the Sharkey partisans to grab at odds of 100 to 80 so eagerly that Corbett's backers became wary and suspicious, the market price was 100 to 75, varying from that but little either way. Four men, bookmakers on the eastern racetracks handled about $25,000 on the result of the match. Young Phil Daly, in a box seat, bet $1,000 to $800 on Corbett with Dan Bradley. Young Tim Sullivan fancied Corbett's chances so well that he risked a total of $800 against $650, mills, has erected a large store, which can his last wager being at the prevailing odds of $100 to $75. Jim Brady took Corbett for Smelts abound in our rivers and a great a bet of $500 to $450 with Marcus Meyer, and before the boxers entered the ring bet $250 to $200 more. A bet of $1,000 to $800 was registered between "Dutch," Hauser The bi-monthly entertainments given by and John Cahill, Hauser taking Corbett.

The fight was one of the most remarkable contests ever seen in New York. From the beginning Sharkey was the aggressor. He was rushing Corbett and trying to force matters. He landed the first blow struck in the fight; also the last one. In the second round Sharkey, when both men were close together as a result of one of his rushes, floored Corbett with a right hand swing on the cheek. It was a fierce blow, and if it had lauded three inches lower it would have put Corbett out. From that time forward Corbett seemed to get himself better in hand. In the third and fourth rounds he took the lead over Sharkey and wore him down by darting in and out and worrying him into many useless and exhausting leads. From the fourth round to the end the men alternated in taking the lead. Sharkey often tired, but vey quickly freshened up again. Corbett did not tire so often, but when he rallied he did not seem so speedy as he had been before. The fight from beginning to end was fast and furious. 'Anti Chair-Warming Society of Mar-riageable Maidens" Determined to Waste no more Winters.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Oct. 24-It is quite certain that many more engagements to marry than ever before will be announced in this city this winter. Seven charming young women met at Miss Mabal Carapel's home on Stamford avenue a few evenings ago, and formed an association which may be called "The Anti-Chair-Warming Society of Marriageable Maidens." This society was originated in a jocose spirit, but it was soon realised that its objects are almost solemn, and marriageable maidens are thronging now to be members of it.

In Bridgeport, as elsewhere, are many young men, well bred and agreeable enough. who vainly think their attentions flatter the young women to whom they are addressed. When the evenings grow long each of these young men chooses a girl whom he thinks most susceptible to his attractions, and to her he devotes himself during the winter. He takes supper at her house, he is as polite to her sister as to herself, if he can play the piano he entertains her with the newest compositions, he regularly occupies the most comfortable chair in the parlor unti 10.30 p.m., when, with the most frigid propriety, he takes his leave.

But he never so much as hints at love. The winter passes and at its wane no en gagement ring decks the fair hand of the young woman whom he thinks he has honored. To be sure, he has taken her sleighing and sent her a box or two of bon bens. But what is a cold sleigh ride or sugared sweets to a young woman who is willing to marry a worthy man?

The young men just described have to be known as "chair warmers." The society formed the other evening will protect its members against these "chair warmers." Any young man who repeatedly visits one of these banded maidens must declare his serious intentions to her mamma or keep away from her house. The members will no longer waste their time, they are not to be put off with sleigh drives and sugar plums; only young men who have proposed and been accepted will be welcomed at their supper tables : there is to be no more playing on pianos and their feelings. Miss Martha Guinan is a charter member of the new society. Miss Guinan, a beautiful and amiable girl, said, at Miss Carabel's house, that for four winters she had entertained as many young men, who purposely, and yet without a purpose monopolized her evenings. "Mamma warned me, soon after each one began to visit me, that I was wasting my time," said Miss Guinan. "I thought mamma was too-well too anxious. But now-I know she was right." If officers of the society have been elected no member will admit it. Indeed, the society's very existence is supposed to be a Your
