

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The scheme to push a railroad through the whole length of Africa, which a decade ago, would have been deemed visionary and impracticable, is now in process of realization. Indeed, about two fifths of the line is in actual operation, and with the completion of the extensions sanctioned and in part under way, only about one half of it will be left for construction. On the north the narrow gauge railway running southward from Cairo along the Nile, is being rapidly extended from the Atbara, its recent terminus, to Omdurman, while on the south an unbroken line of rails extends from Cape Town north to Bulawayo, a distance of 1,400 miles. Already, then, 2,334 miles of the proposed line, which is to be 5,644 miles long, is actually laid down; and the extension of the Bulawayo road north to Zambezi River, and of the Omdurman line southward 480 miles to the Nile end at Sobat, recently authorized, will complete it for about half its length.

In the gap yet to be filled, the road will run along the Central African plateau, a comparatively level country, easy to build in, save the hilly region south of Lake Tanganyika, and between the Victoria Nyanza and Lake Albert Edward. Crossing the Middle Zambesi, it will push northward through the British Central African protectorate, midway between Lakes Bangweolo and Nyassa, to Albert, at the southern end of Lake Tanganyika, a distance from Cape Town of about 2,300 miles. Thence the road will run for 700 miles through German East Africa, east of the lake, or the Congo State, on the west, till it reaches Uganda, whence it will pass east of Lakes Albert Edward and Albert, following the Nile to the southern terminus of the Cairo line at Sobat. Except in the stretch along Lake Tanganyika, the route thus lies throughout its entire length within British and Egyptian territory, and as save in a portion of the southern Sudan, this territory is now in effective occupation and control, its protection is amply assured. The enterprise is a vast one, but Mr. Cecil Rhodes, its originator and moving spirit, declares the resources of the country to be so great that there is no doubt of its financial success, if it can be carried over the first decade, when receipts will necessarily be small. As at the Zambesi the line will pass through a great coal region, and in British Central Africa though both coal and iron districts, and Uganda may be expected to furnish considerable traffic from the start. Mr. Rhodes is doubtless justified in his judgment of the possibilities of the undertaking.

Already he has enlisted the German Emperor in the scheme, an agreement having been reached between them for the passage of the telegraph through the German sphere, and late reports also indicate agreements for the extension of the railroad. As an instrument of civilization and a means of opening up the Dark Continent to the light, nothing could be more valuable, its benefice could be increased by the many branch lines connecting it with the shores of the Red sea, and Indian Ocean. Of these there will be no less than nine, six being south of the Zambesi, one across German East Africa, another the Mombasa Uganda line, and a third the road from Berber to Suskun, the great transcontinental line, with its terminals, thus touching the sea at eleven points.

BABY'S PICTURE.

She had just the day before received the proofs of ten-months-old Willie in six different poses, and the photographer shuddered as he saw her one more enter his parlors.

"I'm sorry," she said, without any obvious grief, "but none of these negatives will do."

"Not one of the six?" he inquired, hopefully.

"No," she said, "I'm afraid not. You see, I like this one very well, though, of course, it doesn't do baby justice, but I don't care, says it's all right, save capture of the dear little fellow."

The one she likes is her favorite for all, and his papa says she should never know for whom it was intended; it looks so cross, and baby is such a sulking child."

"I should consider for a moment, for it makes baby's mouth look so hard."

"It's hard for me to spare the time, but you see it is the only thing to be done!"

CONSUMPTION PER HEAD.

The yearly consumption of potatoes per head of the population in Ireland is 1,467 pounds; in Germany, 1,300 pounds; in the Netherlands, 840 pounds; in Norway and Sweden, 740 pounds; in France, 700 pounds; in Austria, 633 pounds; in Canada, 600 pounds; in Great Britain, 238 pounds; in the United States, 200 pounds; and in Italy, 48 pounds. The yearly consumption of wheat per head of the population is: France, 467 pounds; Canada, 369 pounds; Italy, 307 pounds; Great Britain, 254 pounds; United States, 240 pounds; Australia, 230 pounds; Russia, 93 pounds; Japan, 22 pounds. The yearly consumption of beef per head of the population is: United States, 147 pounds; United Kingdom, 100 pounds; France, 77 pounds; Germany, 64 pounds; Russia, 50 pounds; Italy, 24 pounds. The yearly consumption of eggs per head of the population is: United States, 133 eggs; Canada, 99; France, 78; Germany, 75; Italy, 47; and the United Kingdom, 39.

PHYSICIAN'S EXPERIENCE.

A curious experience is related by a physician of Meudon, France. To examine the throat of one of his children, he held a lighted candle before its open mouth and placed the handle of a pair of forceps against the wick. There was a sudden flash of blue flame from the throat, and the doctor mustache and the child's lips were slightly burned. It is explained that the spoon probably produced a slight retching, which brought a little inflammable gas from the stomach.

GREATEST OF INSECTS.

The elephant beetle of Venezuela is the biggest of its species. An average specimen of this insect, when full grown, weighs half a pound.

JACK.

"I don't see why it isn't all right," she protested. "You haven't received any orders to stop this. And you don't care about the rules. And you don't seem to be stopping it anyhow, so your conscience won't hurt you the least little bit," she went on cheerfully.

Eviston shrugged his shoulders. "Too late now," Eviston put in, laughing. "You ought to have written to us Mrs. Evans before she invited us."

Pembroke moved over nearer to the officer, and tapped him lightly on the shoulder.

"You mean there may be trouble?" he asked in an undertone.

Captain Eviston frowned. "Yes," he said shortly. "That is, of course what the Peigans are up to in these infernal, howling dances of theirs, and I am quite sure we will be the only whites there; this sudden change of heart is rather suspicious."

"I don't believe I like this at all," she sighed. "Either my eyesight is deceiving me or there are at least five thousand blood-thirsty-looking Indians on the prairie; and it's awfully warlike in them, sir. And I wish I were back at the detachment."

Stirling checked noiselessly.

"Don't just about such horrid things, please," she said.

There was another long wait, and the sun was still hot, for even though I meant to tell her that she must not go out on Nellie this afternoon, but stay with Rafferty (the other orderly). I'm afraid I didn't tell her good-bye, either poor little chappie."

She sighed a little. "Well, she always waited fully three quarters of an hour for me to get back to the Indians nearest the lodge fell back and seemed to shift themselves into kaleidoscopic figures of brilliant hues, and there rose a soft patter of moccasins feet that beat time restlessly to the quick throb of voices plumping and galloping about came nearer and fiercer.
