Hon. A. G. Blair's Kindly Ast.

Moncton Transcript : Mr. J. B. Lambkin, the well known district passenger agent of the L. C. R., who returned yesterday afternoon from Quebec, where he witnessed the departure of the Canadian contingent for the Transvaal, in conversation with a Transcript reporter, narrated an incident which occurred as the boys were embarking. There were thousands of people present. The crush was something intense. Hon. A. G. Blair and Hon. W. S. Fielding were pushing their way through the surging masses when suddenly a feeble cry was heard near by exclaiming in mournful tones, "I have lost my little sister." Mr. Blair felt something holding on to his knee and looking down saw a little girl not more than five or six years old being crushed by the excited crowds. The minister picked the little ragged tot up and placed it on his shoulder. He appealed to the crowd to let him through, and his noble act was greatly admired and a passage was promptly opened for him and his charge. He took the little one to a house near by where he left it in safety. In the rush he got separated from Mr. Fielding.

Queer, isn't it?

Admiral Dewey, it is said, sailed into the mined bay of Manils on the 30th of April, without a tremor, though whenever he has occasion to visit a dentist his knees weaken and his heart fails him. Gov. Roosevelt never turned his back on an enemy with a gun or a machete in his hand but a mild nannered dentist armed with a pair of forceps in his hands, it is asserted, is more terrible than an army with banners. There are those who with heroic gaiety attack and vanquish the hash that is set before them at their boarding house, yet are overcome by a tired and creepy feeling when the doctor suggests that they should swallow a sugarcoated pill or a dose of castor oil. One hears of old salts who sail the ocean blue in ancient ships, that the rats long since deserted, who domineer over their crews and fear nothing that exists in or above the water, who at home sink into the position of humble and obedient scullions, while their wives, who would shriek at the sight of a mouse, take command, and are the most imperious of masters. There is something of the Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde in all sorts and conditions of men. -St. John Gazatte.

In the 25th round Jeffries' left glove flew off, bringing the fight to an end, although the crowd urged Sharkey to rush in and do Jeffries up. This he tried to do, but Jeffries fought him back, and Referee Siler rushed to the rescue. The referee, in an interview. said that Jeffries received the decision over Sharkey because he thought he had the best of the contest. "Sharkey put up a great fight but he was outgeneralled by Jeffries. The champion fought a clean cut battle. Jeffries outpointed throughout the fight, with the exception of a few rounds.
