FATAL ACCIDENT IN P. E. I.—An accident happened at Ellerslie last Saturday, by which Mabel, the three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Hayes, lost her life. About 10 a.m. Mrs. Hayes poured a pot of hot water into a bucket on the floor, for scrubbing, and while she was in the pantry procuring some cold water, Mabel fell backwards into the hot water. Mrs. Long and McLaughlin were at once summoned, but all their skill was of no avail, clothing his ideas in very dignified phraseology. Rev. W. Townsend addressed the people and gave very timely counsel. He exhorted the congregation to respect their minister, to pay his stipend promptly and not to trespass too much on his time. The whole service, from start to finish, was very interesting and edifying, and Mr. MacLean begins his work in St. John's church under auspicious circumstances.

The ladies of the congregation invited the ministers and members and adherents of the church to a reception and supper that was given in the Temperance Hall in honor of the occasion. We understand it was a very enjoyable and happy gathering.

The Adams Cup Race.—The deferred race for the Adams cup between the flyers of the Miramichi Yacht Club came off last Thursday. There was a flat calm at the hour for starting but Oriana appeared and soon after Maude was also out. A slight easterly breeze sprang up, but it was too light to make it worth while for Commodore Miller to come to the line.

Commodore Miller, with his usual courtesy, was on hand with his steam yacht, Florence, as judge's boat and had a party of Newcastle and Chatham gentlemen on board. Messrs. G. H. Harrison and E. T. Jones were judges. The trophy to be sailed for was the cup presented by Thos. D. Adams, Esq. The course was from a line off the A. & R. Loggie wharf, Chatham, to a turning point off Col. Call's wharf, Newcastle, and return—about 9 miles.

Maude crossed the line fifty seconds ahead of Oriana, with the lazy fair wind hardly filling the sails. It was Oriana's favorite breeze and she gained about four and a half minutes over Maude on the run to Newcastle. Luck favored her about a mile below the turn, where she caught a favorable freshening wind which came in with the tide and literally ran away from Maude, which remained stern almost in the doldrums. When Maude had sailed down and met the breeze she was rapidly overhauling Oriana, when her flying jib took fire in one of the snap forestays and the jib had to be cut clear. George S. Anderson conducted a short conference service. There were thirty-six delegates on the register of the convention.

matter, can be perfect without a well-arranged and properly ordered kitchen. In this respect the Royal is thoroughly equipped. It has a new steel range about twelve feet long, and galvanneal steel covers for pastry and other fine baking, the best modern devices for ventilation by which the odors of the cooking are carried away and the room cooled. The arrangement of the various utensils is a study in their line and indicates that the artistic is not to be found exclusively under the public eye at the Royal, while scrupulous cleanliness prevails everywhere.

Such hotels as the Royal contribute to the importance of our maritime centres and are effective promoters of their interests. They attract only those of our own people when they travel, and the Royal is the St. John home of the best North Shore people—but they induce summer visitors and tourists to come to the Province from other countries. These find the comforts and attentions they require and are not only induced to come again, but also to cause their friends to do likewise, and the ADVANCE is, therefore, glad to be in a position to assure its numerous readers that the Royal, at St. John, is a first class hotel in all respects and superior to any other of the many excellent ones in our larger Maritime cities.
