THE LEGISLATURE.

Hon. Mr. Emmerson said : - I am glad to see that the hon. gentleman has, at last, done what he should have done in the days of the session. I am glad that he has placed me in the position of being able to deal with something definite, rather than having to deal with generalities and insinuations. With respect to the statement made by the hon. leader of the opposition I desire to give the charges the most emphatic denial. The charges are not based on facts. I will certainly ask the fullest inquiry and investigation into the charges. [Applause.] Until that investigation takes place it will not be necessary to make any further statement.

Mr. Tweedie said the hon. gentleman having formulated charges, we have now something to go on. It has been said that the government were trying to shield themselves and their colleague, the leader, but their position now was as it had been ever since the opening of the legislature-ready to grant the fullest possible investigation just as soon as specific charges had been made. Now that the leader of the opposition has made his charges, it seems to me that he should have gone further and asked for committee to investigate them-the opposition leader having at last plucked up sufficient courage to make his charges. But not having asked for a Committee it may be necessary to pass a resolution for the ap. pointment of a committee. He would like to ask the leader of the oppositson if he intended to ask for the appointment of

Mr. Hazen : I have made these charges and it is for the department to say what by a further motion.

Receas till half past seven o'clock.

After recess Hon. Mr. Emmerson said In rising to make the motion I intend to move, it is not necessary that I should make any extended remarks. I may however re. iterate my statement made before recess that I am glad that the leader of the Opposition has at last removed this matter from the arena of insinuation and innuendo and made specific charges. If he had done so earlier in the session, instead of making motions that he must have known were not in accord with the rules of the House, he would have stood better before the country than in allowing nearly four weeks of the session to elapse before taking action at this late hour. However, I desire to congratulate him upon bringing forward something of a definite character. Although the hon. member has not asked for a committee of inquiry, I feel it incumbent upon myself to ask for an immediate investigation of these charges. (Applause.) While I do not think this is the time to make extended remarks, yet I may be permitted to say that I court the fullest investigation into these charges [hear, hear and applause]. It may perhaps not be out of place for me to say that I do not in any sense fear the result of any investigation. [Applause] As I have stated over and over again, the question o the cost of our bridges is one of policy and have frequently stated that I was willing to .be judged not only by my contemporaries, but by history with respect to whether the bridges we have erected were not in the best interests of the country. I have every coufidence that the fullest investigation wi affirm and confirm what I have said with reference to these charges.

It is not for the premier set forth as above made by him.] and Whereas the said Honorable Henry R. | hon. gentleman to prove that he is guilty, Emmerson, from his place in the house, has demanded that the said Mr. Hazen should move for a committee and have the said charges so formulated, investigated and tried out in the usual and constitutional manner, but the said Mr. Hazen has refused to ask for such committee, and whereas the Chief Commissioner has, from his place in the house, denied the truth of the said charges and has asked that the same may be investigated forthwith, and that this house understands very well the question of sincerity or insincerity, and when he formulates a charge he must know that it should be immediately followed by the constitutional request for a committee. When the hon, member said he was going to wait, what course did he pursue? How long was he going to wait? At the first of the session he asked for a committee that would be fruitless and then offered motions that were out of order, and now, when forced to formulate charges, at the last stages of the session, he wants further delay and protests against the investigation. Is it not the duty of an hou, member who formulates so serious a charge to ask for a committee ? [Applause.] Is that not the constitutional practice ? What excuse has he ? The only inference I can draw is that the hon. member hoped to lay charges on the table and that the government would not take up the gauntlet he threw down, and he would get the credit of making charges which no one dared to take up. If this investigation lasts till next July or August I tell the hon. member that he will be forced to come before that committee and prove his charges, I may say that we have been annoyed at the way in which the hon, member has delayed this matter. If he believed that the country. Premier of this province had knowingly and wilfully squandered the public money, it was his duty to have formulated his charge at the first opportunity on the opening of the house, instead of which he has waited Fishin's looking hopeful. nearly a month. He has given no excuse for not moving for a committee, and now he protests against the government moving for on . taking the proper, usual, constitution-
