NOTES AND COMMENTS

The April number of the North American Review contains an article by Mr. M. G. Mulhall, in which the wellknown statistician sets forth some interesting data relating to the amount of British capital which is invested i foreign countries. It appears that the fraction of the national capital which is thus exposed to extra risk in case of war or international complications it was forty years ago.

Mr. Mulhall begins by comparing the principal European countries in respect to their floating capital, under which of wealth which takes the form of pinto. floating capital. Thus Germany, whose has but $7,360,000,000 in the shape of floating capital, whereas France, with

Of the last-named sum pursuers. $11,900,000,000 represents investments at home, and $9,300,000,000 investments abroad. These are the figures given for 1896: in 1882 the United Kingdom had but $4,406,000,000 and in 1860 but $700,000,000 invested in foreign parts. It is a remarkable fact that, while the whole floating capital of Great Britain and Ireland falls somewhat short of being three times larger than it was in 1860, the proportion invested out of the kingdom is, as we have said, more than thirteen times as large. emigrating capital was, according to the latest statistics secured by Mr. etc., $1,700,000,000.

United Kingdom is more than half that no less than $350,000,000. If this difis not distant when the major part and an official recognition of the fact terest offered is not tempting. It is Northwest Territory to waste time in Great Britain. It will be much more tain it for railways in Argentina and for gold mining in South Africa.
