A good story of Col. Burnaby is told in Henry Lucy's book, "Faces and Places." When Burnaby was a young soldier in barracks, a horse dealer arrived at Windsor with a pair of beautiful little ponies he had been commanded to show the queen. Before exhibiting them to her majesty he took them to the cavalry barracks for display to the officers of the guards. Some of them, by way of a pleasant surprise, led the ponies upstairs into Burnaby's room, where they were much admired. But when the time came to take leave an alarming difficulty presented itself. The ponies, though they had walked upstairs, could by no means be induced to walk down again. The officers were in a fix, the horse dealer was in despair, when young Burnaby settled the matter by taking up the ponies, one under each arm, and walking downstairs, deposited them in the barrack room. The queen heard the story when she saw the ponies, and doubtless felt an increased sense of security at Windsor in having this standing testimony to the prowess of her Household troops.

Not everyone has been bitten by a dog, a cat or other animal whose weapons of offense and defense are their teeth, and consequently has not lived in dread of hydrophobia or lockjaw or blood poisoning. Still fewer have any comprehension of the great power required to inflict the wounds that all have heard of, even though they have not experienced them. The teeth, even of the largest carnivora are merely "spear-heads"; but the force which "works" these instruments is prodigious. It seems as if for the moment the animal threw all its bodily energy into the combination of muscular action which we call a "bite."

When a lady of rank once said to Malherbe, the famous French poet, whose morals were as faulty as his verses were perfect, "I want to show you some of the most exquisite verses ever written; they will be a revelation to you," Malherbe answered: "Pardon me, madam. If, as you say, the verses are the most perfect ever written I have already seen them, for they must be my own."

Perhaps it is the wonderful fascination of the plain which causes the solitary swagsman, the Australian substitute for our tramp, to regard the desert as his final tomb. With no great zeal for work, he bumps his billy along the track because the life, being one of ease and idleness, does not jar upon his independence. When his tucker gives out, he makes tracks for the nearest station and either works for a space or begs a loan of the victuals which are essential for carrying him a little further upon the trail. In his relation to all tramps and belated travelers the fashion of the country inspires the boss of the ship-walk with most generous instincts. He feeds everything that comes to him after sunset.

which never failed to disarm a swordsman, was known in more than one of the capitals of Europe. Ten years before he started for Khiva there was much talk at the Rag of the wonderful feat of the young guardsman, who undertook for a small wager, to hop a quarter of a mile, run a quarter of a mile, ride a quarter of a mile, row a quarter of a mile and walk a quarter of a mile in a quarter of an hour, and who covered the mile and a quarter of distance in ten minutes and twenty seconds.

ST. JOHN STREET, CHATHAM
Spectacles
The undemonstrated advantages are claimed for Mackenzie's spectacles. That from the peculiar construction of the Glasses they Assist and Preserve the sight, rendering frequency changes unnecessary.
That they confer a brilliancy and distinctness of vision, with an amount of Ease and Comfort not hitherto enjoyed by spectacle wearers.
That the material from which the Lenses are ground is manufactured especially for optical purposes, by Dr. CHARLES BACON'S improved patent method, and is Pure, Hard and Brilliant and not liable to become scratched.
That the frames in which they are set, whether in Gold, Silver or Steel, are of the finest quality and finish, and guaranteed perfect in every respect.
The long wearing of these and you will wear a pair of good glasses, so come to the Medical Hall and be properly fitted or be charged.

When his tucker gives out, he makes tracks for the nearest station and either works for a space or begs a loan of the victuals which are essential for carrying him a little further upon the trail. In his relation to all tramps and belated travelers the fashion of the country inspires the boss of the ship-walk with most generous instincts. He feeds everything that comes to him after sunset.

Perhaps it is the wonderful fascination of the plain which causes the solitary swagsman, the Australian substitute for our tramp, to regard the desert as his final tomb. With no great zeal for work, he bumps his billy along the track because the life, being one of ease and idleness, does not jar upon his independence. When a lady of rank once said to Malherbe, the famous French poet, whose morals were as faulty as his verses were perfect, "I want to show you some of the most exquisite verses ever written; they will be a revelation to you," Malherbe answered: "Pardon me, madam. If, as you say, the verses are the most perfect ever written I have already seen them, for they must be my own."
