He was conscious of the kindly feeling of which the gift was the interpretation. This feeling he knew was not restricted to the conference, but was general throughout the diocese. The receptions tendered him, the episcopal insignia of which he was the recipient, having a significance of their own, cheered him, perved hin for the work and filled him with confidence in the future. Popular feeling in regard to the Boer war is rapidly veering around in this coun'ry. Despite misleading statements F. W. McCloskey and N. Foster Thorne to the contrary continually published in championed the negative. The award of | Canada and Great Britain, public sent ment here heretofore has always been on the sile of the Boers, both because they constituted a so-called republic and be cause of the disproportionate size of the combatants. But this feeling has been somewhat like that of a man who sees his brother engaged in a fight of which he does not approve. He would not b sorry if the brother got pretty well punched to teach him not to be so hasty the next time, but he would also feel much disposed to take off his coat and go in, i there seemed to be any danger of the brother gett no the worst of it. During our war with Spain, Canada seemed to feel about the same way. It considered that we were altogether too cocky and wanted us puni hed, but not defeated.

As long as England is merely fighting the Boers, she will meet with lots of opposition in this country, but as soon as any European power attempts to chip in. the world will be astonished by the depth in this country. Blood is a good deal Adamson.s Balsam does not deceive you thicker than water, and most Americans into thinking you are being helped only to realize that the preservation of their own race ascendency depends on the ultimate victory of England.

The close relationship between this country and England was shown at the New Year's reception at the White House, when the entire British embassy was present. The good feeling between the two countries was also emphas zed by the pleasure that was expressed at the fact that Mr. Eliot, of the embassy, had recently been The conference intended honoring one of made a knight of the order of the fighting saints, St. Michael and St. George. "It is all newspaper talk", he said, "and Canadians a e losing no sleep on account of ir. But they will take it out in talk.

Another interesting visitor to the Capital during the past week, was Mr. P. Monseigneur Barry has the happy faculty Labry, of Manchester, England, who talked entertainingly of the Boer war. "The end of the war will undoubtedly see England supreme all the way from the Cape to the Zambesi", he said. "The Boers had every advontage in men, munitions and position at the outset, and they have won a few battles. But Britain's sea power will enable har to win in the end. Atthough the navy may not fire a single shot during the war, victory will be due to it, not only because it will make possible the transport of unlimited troops | Chatham, N.
