Surrender of Pretoria.

As we go to press Chatham is preparing to celebrate the surrender of Pretoria. In common with other towns and cities all over the Empire, Chatham and Newcastle got up demonstrations of Thursday last over the premature announcement that the Boer capital had been captured, but now that the event has actually taken place, Chatham, at all events, is doing it over again. Everybody is joining in the fete; flags are flying, the bands are out and music is in the air. The Dominion government has directed that the public building be decorated illuminated, in case the civic authorities should make a demonstration, and the work is being done. The Town Hall, and many other buildings, residences and stores are decorated and illuminated and there is also

They left on Thursday morning's express, accompanied by number of our local sports, and were met at Chatham station by Capt. The two teams joined in the street parade at 10, o'clock in the morning and helped to enliven the proceedings of the day until p.m., the hour set for the game. There was an immense gathering to witness the game and everybody seemed to be in the best spirits. The Campbellton boys went to the bat and managed to secure one score, Chatham boys making five runs in their first inning. Thus the game progressed, the Chatham team always keeping in the lead and winning easily by a score of 41 to 7 The field work of the Chatham team was excellent while their batting was also good, and it was apparent before many innings were played that they would secure an easy victory, when it was considered that boys had not had a single practice. Notwithstanding this fact they made some good plays, particularly O'Keeffe, Powell, Melanson, Lawrence, Courtney, and McMillan and the result might have been far different had they been in practice. However, the boys enjoyed the day thoroughly and are loud in their praises of their treatment by the Chatham team and citizens, the unani mous expression being "They treated us

Johannesburg

Between Cape Town and Pretoria there is only one settlement, with the possible exception of B'oemfontein that can claim to be a city, and that is Johannesburg. The great mining industry at this point was what first gave it an impetus. Before the war rumors of war occurred, there were in Johannesburg approximately 150,000 people. The houses of the wealthy and well-to-do were as attractively built and handsomely furnished as those to be found in any old and settled country. The building owned and occupied by the chief club at Johannesburg is said to be finer and more elaborately furnished than any club house in Montreal. The city has eighty miles of streets. It offers a weird mixture of civilization and savagedom. Laid out in leisurely fashioa with broad and ample thoroughfares where a stone building breaks occasionally the meagre and ugly effect of hastily improvised shop-fronts and boarding-houses, it has potentiality of a splendid modern city of the Paris or Vienna order. There is plenty of room in Africa, and no inducement to overcrowding. In fact, Johannesburg covers an immense area, reaching out its tenacles on every side and wearing the large gold reef, the Witwatersrand with its mining villages, with a sert of long double lapping tail. A Butcher-Not a Sportsman.

If the Enperor of Germany were an ordinary mortal the care with which he preserves and the pride with which he makes public the exact number of the animals he CORN, succeeds in killing would be taken as proof that he is entirely lacking in the true spirit of sport. For the real hunter, unless of course he hunts for the market, and therefore belongs to a class of hunters so closely related to butchers as not to count in the present discussion, notes the number of his victims only as a minor and incidental feature of success, and rests all his claim to the successful envy of his fellows on achievements reached in conditions that precluded the possibility of filling up much space on the toly sheet.
