Not Now a Protectionist.

It will be remembered that President McKinley was, years ago, the father of one of the most drastic protectionist measures ever passed by the United States Senate. It was "The McKinley Bill," no doubt, to which he primarily owed his 'nomination and election president. He has, however, now modified his views. In a recent interview he said :-

"I have within the last few years greatly modified my views on this sul ject. I was formerly a strong advocate of protection, but since then we have advanced a great deal in the United States and our manufactures have gone ahead with gigantic strides, so that now we are in a position to trade with foreign countries on a reciprocal basis with mutual advantages to both, for the goods which they specially

The Sequel to That "Combine" Sale of Crown Lands

The sale was cancelled by the government on the recommendation of the su vevor general who had reason to believe that a combine had been entered into by certain lumbermen in order that they might obtain control of the berths at a less figure than they could be bought for under

Great interest was taken in the sale and there was a large attendance, among those present being Premier Tweedie. Surveyor General Dunn, John B. Mc-Connell, William Engel, Bangor; F. B. Carvell, Woodstock; W. P. Lowell. Bangor; F. W. Sumner, Moncton : Frank Curran, Bathurst ; James Robinson, M. competitors for the berths were James Robinson and the applicant, William Engel, of Bangor, the figures of these high for the others.

The timber berths sold are on the Upsalquitch and Nepisiguit rivers, and were sold as follows :

Engel at $200 a mile. Mr. Robinson bought a total of square m les at $6 750, and Mr. Engel's purchase aggregated 30 square miles for which he paid $6 222.

It will be observed that the lands sold, as above-stated, are those which combine endeavored to secure at a sale which took place on 22nd ult. by ar arrangement amongst themselves no to bid against each other. They were knocked down to the applicant, but the completion of the purchase was at once refused by the government in the public

The Chatham World eagerly availed

tself of the announcement of the sale to make of it an occasion for one of its isual dishonest attacks on the personal integrity of members of the government. A decent newspaper would have made enquiry as to what the government had done, before assailing the character its members individually. The World had telephonic communication with the Crown Land office, and it could also have interviewed the premier, who was in his business office only a few doors away. It did not want to do that however, as it preferred to publish the following :-

Chatham's Public Works.

The work of laying the pipes of Chatham's new sewerage system is being carried on at a very moderate rate by the contractors. To the casual observer, the crews employed seem to be much too light to encourage the belief that the work wil be done in the time contemplated by the contract. It would be more satisfactory citizens generally if a little more effort to increase the working forces was made now when conditions for excauating are favorable, in tead of at a later period when the wet season will doubtless be pleaded as a reason for extension of time.

Mean Tactics.

Referring, of course, to the Transcript and other papers of its kind, which have not yet apologised for their unmerited aspersions on the local government in connection with "that Crown Land sale," the Sr. John Telegraph says :-

"It will be remembered that certain timber limits on the Nepisiguit and Upsalquitch rivers were offered for sale by the New Brunswick Crown Land Department ome few weeks ago and the limits were bid u at the upset price by the applicant. The opposition press were unnecessarily jubilant over what would mean a serious loss of evenue to the province, if it had been an ecomplished fact, but as a matter of fact immediately on the conclusion of the sale, the government had notified the applicant that the grants would not issue and the limits would again be offered for sale. This was quite within the rights of the province, which reserves the privilege of withholding the grants where the e is an appearance of collusion between the bidders for these "The government carried its policy into

The successful bidders were Mr. James Robinson, M. P., of Millerton, Northumberland county, N. B., and William Engel, of Bangor, Me., both of whom are large lumber operators, who have a practical knowledge of timber limit values, and whom we have no reason to doubt are quite satisfied with their new purchases. We have been waiting to hear some words of commendation of the government's action from the journals who, on the first sale, so scundly abused the Tweedie administration, results from the sale of these limits. Their abuse of the government in reference to the combination of the lumber interests at the first sale of these berths are entirely unwarranted, and was simply the result of these wise critics jumping too harshly to conclusions. Finding themselves in error, they have not the fairness to acquit the government of the unfair catch verdict which they themselves have passed upon it. The readers of the journals are probably wondering why judgment has not been pronounced in accordance with the opposition system of
