Ontario Elections. The general elections of members of the Ontario legislature took place last Thursday. The Liberals again won by a slightly reduced majority.

The Pulp Mill Matter. Everybody will or ought to be glad that Messrs. Tweedie and Hanington, the liquidators of the Maritime Sulphite Fibre Company's estate, have succeeded in obtaining an order of sale from Judges Barker and McLeod.

Chatham Mill Property to be Sold. On Monday afternoon the case of the Maritime Sulphite Fibre Company (Limited) came before their honours, Judge Barker and Judge McLeod, the former acting as judge in equity and the latter as judge under the winding up act.

The liquidators, Hon. L. J. Tweedie and A. H. Hanington, K. C., recently presented a petition to their honours and this petition came up for hearing before their honours on Monday.

Mr. Tweedie, one of the liquidators, stated to their honours that he had been in communication with parties in England who seemed disposed to buy the property and that their representatives had visited New Brunswick and had reported very favorably.

WAR ENDED! Kitchener briefly communicates the News! The King's Message to the Nation! Kruger, who wasn't Consulted, is again Surprised!

Peace will be popular amongst the Boers! Concessions by the British were only on Minor Points! The Boers are to come, absolutely, under British rule!

Arming again against British interests and authority will never be possible in South Africa! The longed-for news of peace in South Africa has come at last, and there is rejoicing throughout the British Empire.

A London despatch of Sunday evening says:—The news which Great Britain was so anxiously awaiting came, characteristically, on a peaceful and uninteresting Sunday afternoon, when London presents a particularly dead and deserted appearance.

At about 1 o'clock Sunday afternoon the war office received the following despatch from Lord Kitchener, dated Pretoria, May 31, 11.15 p.m.:—"A document containing terms of surrender was signed here this evening at 10.30 o'clock by all the Boer representatives, as well as by Lord Milner and myself."

The clerk on duty at the war office transmitted this message to Buckingham Palace, where King Edward was lunching. At about 5 o'clock word was received permitting the publication of this message, and the small notice which was stuck up outside the war office consisted of a copy of Lord Kitchener's telegram.

The terms of the surrender should be satisfied by Kruger, and declared that the Boers in Europe had no hand in the settlement. "The terms will show," continues the correspondent of the Daily Mail, "that the British government carried its contentions on every vital point, while the minor concessions, financial treatment, will greatly appeal to the Boers in general."

In an editorial article on the news from South Africa the Times points out that there can be no treaty, but merely, as Lord Kitchener names it, "a document containing terms of surrender."

On Sunday evening telegrams announcing the surrender of the Boers and Free Staters were read in thousands of churches all over the British world, however, and hymns of praise and prayers of thanksgiving were offered.

Now that the war, which for exertion, sacrifice and loss, was unparalleled by any except those preceding the great revolution of the hundred years war, had been closed, it remained for the completion of the success to transform what had been heroic enemies into hearty friends.

Peace was announced after more than two years and seven months' war—a war which tried the British Empire sorely and wiped the Boers from the list of nations.

"The King has received the welcome news of the cessation of hostilities in South Africa with infinite satisfaction, and His Majesty trusts that peace may speedily be followed by the restoration of prosperity in his new dominions, and that the feelings necessarily engendered by war will give place to earnest co-operation on the part of His Majesty's South African subjects in promoting the welfare of their common country."

substituted. There is to be no tax on the Transvaal to pay the cost of the war. The sum of three millions sterling ($15,000,000) is to be provided for restocking the Boer farms. "Rebels are liable to trial, according to the law of the colony to which they belong. The rank and file will be disfranchised for life. The death penalty will not be sufficient."

London, June 2.—Except Ireland, practically all the United Kingdom is holiday making today, in celebration of the conclusion of peace in South Africa. The streets everywhere are thronged with people who indulge in cheering, or blowing penny trumpets.
