It was also realised that Mr. Foster one third each of the cost of an in ermight fail to carry even a fairly strong o ovincial bridge over the Restigouche at conservative constituency, not from lack of parliamentary ability, but because of his negative, if not repellant personal characteristics. He would, doubtless, command the votes of men the political fate of Mr. Foster after his defeat in St. John, with the exception, perhaps, of two or three leaders. It was recognised that while Mr.

Foster was a tower of strength when talking was to be done in the House of Commons, or on the stump, he was, outside of that, a source of weakness. As the leader in the conspiracy against premier Bowell he was almost execrated by the more sturdy element of the conservative party and looked upon as treacherous and unreliable whenever those characteristics might be employed to further his personal ends. It is, therefore, not to be wondered at that Mr. Foster had, up to the late visit of Sir Charles Tupper to Montreal, failed in his quest for a constituency. Through the influence of the old Chief of the party it is believed, however, that its leaders in North Ontario, where the House of Commons seat is vacant through the death of Mr. Mc-Lean, will be induced to offer the nomination to the ex-finance minister. One of the leading arguments used in shed, save at the railway bridge. favor of the proposed effort to get Mr. Foster in parliament again is the want of a financial critic on the opposition

Hon. A. G. Blair, in responding to th toast of the cabinet, spoke of the splendid wathering and the enthusiasm with which the names of the several ministers had been received. He was sure the hearts of the Liberal party beat in the sincerest sympathy for the distinguished leader, Sir Wilfrid Lanrier, and hoped that he would long be spared to stand at the head of public affairs. In his opinion, no man in Canadian public life was more worthy of esteem and c ntidence than the minister of finance, in whose houor this banquet was held. It had been prophesied that when men, accustomed only to provincial affairs, were called, in 1896, to enter the dominion arens they would be found to have narrow and cramped views; but when history comes to be written, it will be shown that no man had ever filled the portfolio of finance with more broadmindedness or more success.

He had grappled with the greatest problems and had won a series of notable victories. The finance minister had cordially supported all efforts of his fellow administrators to further the interests of the several departments. Had it not been for this cooperation, he (the minister of railways) would not have been able to raise the I.C.R. from the rut in which he found it, and made it of increased worth to the maritime provinces and more valuable as an asset to the Dominion of Canada.

The Liberal party must be given the is the sort of remedy you want. Price 50 credit of holding steady the helm of the ship condition of stagnation which had once paralyzed industry and were prepared to stand behind the projected enterprises of a progressive administration.

If the Liberal administration decided to extend the I. C. R. still further to the west. such policy would meet with no opposition thought he could promise the Liberals of
