

Soft Harness EUREKA Harness Oil. You can make your harness as soft as a glove and as strong as iron by using EUREKA Harness Oil. It is the only harness oil that makes the harness soft and pliable, and keeps it so for a long time.

Boot and Shoe DEPARTMENT. Dress Shoes for Men. Newest Shapes. Right Prices. Evening Slippers for Women. Pretty Styles. Perfect Fitting. See our Window Display. Ladies' Black Cloth Gaiters. length 9 inches at 55c. & 80c. " 11 " 75c. & $1.10. Children's Black Cloth Gaiters. length 10 inches at 75c. " 13 " 85c.

Boys' Youths' & Men's clothing DEPARTMENT. Boys' Three-Piece Suits. Prices $3.25 to $6.50. TWEEDS, CHEVIOTS, ETC. Boys' Norfolk Suits. The most popular style for Boys of 6 to 10 years. Prices $1.85 to $4.00. Boys' Sailor Suits. A style of garment that looks well on any boy. Boys' Reefers, Overcoats, Etc.

was led by the field secretary. The closing words of the president were: "We shall strive this year to make this a banner Sunday school county." To this end it was resolved to hold a one-day institute in Chatham, and perhaps another in Newcastle, in February.

Bowman's Headache Powders. Safe and Reliable. Cures All Headaches Promptly. In Powder and Wafer Form, 10 and 25 Cents. THE BAIRD COMPANY, LTD.

The J. B. Snowball Co. Ltd. STAPLE AND FANCY GROCERIES. We have now arriving our CHRISTMAS AND WINTER STOCK OF Canned Goods.

Publisher's Notice. The publisher desires to urge upon the notice of all who wish to contribute matter of any kind to the ADVANCE'S columns—whether it be advertising, news or notices of meetings, etc.—that the paper goes to press on Wednesday afternoon and, to ensure publication, their favors should be in the office not later than Wednesday morning.

W. S. LOGGIE Company, Ltd. COMMERCIAL BUILDING.

Death of an M. P. P. The death took place at St. Basil, Madawaska county, on Friday of Narcisse A. Gagnon, M. P. P. Mr. Gagnon was born in Quebec about 69 years ago and was, for some years, a school teacher. Later he opened a general store at St. Basil. The present term was his second as an M. P. P. In the last election he and Thomas Charbonneau were successful candidates. The deceased gentleman was warden for years of Madawaska county. Mr. Gagnon married a sister of the late Levie Theriault, who for years was a representative for Madawaska. Premier Tweedie and the other members of the government sent a telegram of condolence to the widow and Chief Commissioner Lablanc represented the Executive at the funeral.

Obituary. The funeral of the late James Brown, who died last week at Verdun hospital, Montreal, took place at Newcastle on Monday and was largely attended. Mr. Brown was about sixty years old. He was a native of Scotland and came to Miramichi when a young man. He engaged in mercantile business in Newcastle and was successful. He was quite prominent in politics and sat in the Municipal Council for several years and was warden of the county for one year.

The author of this book traces the ancestry of those who are now called Tweedie or Tweedy back to the men of Norman, Flemish or Saxon blood who in the reign of King David I, 1124, crossed the border of Northumbria and Selkirk along the upper stretches of the Tweed. It was from this first person thus distinguished being mentioned in the reign of Alexander II, (1214) as Johannes de Tweeda, whose name being interpreted into less stately vernacular is simply John of the Tweed, or John Tweedie. In the reign of Alexander III. (1249) this John Tweedie is recorded as having obtained a charter under the name of John de Tweedy, which approximately more closely to modern appellation. Early in the fourteenth century—probably in the reign of David II—we find a Roger Tweedie marrying the eldest daughter of Sir William Fraser, and the Tweedie family gained possession of their most important estates, Drummelzier and Oliver, though the original stronghold of the clan is supposed by some to be Tinnies Castle, not far from Drummelzier. Of Tinnies only a few fragments survive. Drummelzier still exists in a reconstructed form, dating back to the 15th century, while Oliver Castle has vanished, though near the site was built by Thomas Tweedie in 1780 the present House of Oliver, which has incorporated into its walls many of the old carved stones from the Tweedie or Tweedy residence—some of them castles, associated with the name of Tweedie are Fraid, Noidpath, Wrae, Dreas, Halmyre, Kingledore, Patervan, Heartstaircase, Quarter, Ruchan, Hopkatie and Hall Manor—a list of which might be extended still further were it necessary. Into the detailed genealogical affiliations of the various branches of the clan as a whole, the author has found it impossible to enter. In an appendix, however, he gives more or less complete pedigrees of seventeen families bearing the name of Tweedie. The bulk of the book is taken up with various incidents and details in which figure many of those bearing the name of Tweedie—their inter-marriages with the Douglases, the Cockburns, the Kerrs, etc., their feuds with the Cockburns, the Fergusons, the McNameys, and the Vetches, and in addition numerous curious and entertaining items well illustrating the social and moral peculiarities of the times, the most noteworthy, perhaps, to readers of the present day being the implication of William and Adam Tweedie in the assassination of Rizzio. Early in the sixteenth century one George Tweedie migrated to England and settled in Essex Co., descendants of his being found later in Yorkshire, Bedfordshire and Kent. Of more interest to provincial readers is the Irish branch of the family, descended from an officer of Tweedie's, Scotland, who served under William of Orange in his Irish campaign and settled in County Leitrim, where he had received a grant of lands. His great grandson, Joseph Tweedie, had a family of seven, one of whom, a daughter, married in Ireland; two other daughters married in Scotland and Canada not specified, and three sons and a daughter established themselves in the north of New Brunswick. Many of their descendants subsequently moved to the United States. The oldest of the family, Robert, had as his eldest child Joseph, the father of Premier Tweedie. Three other of Robert's sons were the Rev. William Tweedie, the Rev. Robert Tweedie and the Rev. James Tweedie, respected ministers of the Methodist church. William was the father of Prof. W. M. Tweedie, of Mt. Allison, and Robert the father of the late L. B. Tweedie, barrister-at-law, of Hampton. The Tweedie coat-of-arms, as found in the list of Scottish arms made by Sir David Lindsay, Lord Lyons, in 1542, is technically described as "argent a eagle crested gules a chief azure. That is, as it appears to the eye, a white ground, having a broad blue band across the top, and in the lower part a red St. Andrew's cross with scalloped edges. The motto is a good one—"Thou and I think," varying in some cases to "Thou and I think on," which is, being interpreted, "Endure, bear up and keep up a steady thinking."

The array of bridal presents was a splendid and valuable one. They were made by local friends as well as a large number from outside places. A valuable marble chime clock from the employees of the McDonald woodworking factory, was a much appreciated gift. A substantial sum in $20 gold pieces from the groom's father, a set of white fox furs, silver breakfast, tea and lunch services, silver salvers, a dinner set, beautiful cut glass, silver waiters and baskets, an oxeye table and a variety of other useful articles were amongst the evidences of good will sent to the bride, who, as well as the groom, will be much missed by a large and appreciative social circle. The wedding, although a comparatively quiet one, was one of the leading social events of the year in Chatham.

On December 1st the rates in the sleeping cars on the C. P. R. between St. John and Winnipeg will be advanced from $8 to $9, which will make it exactly 50 per cent. rate. The excellence of the tourist car service and the advance in the cost both of constructing and operating these cars is given as the reason for the advance. The change is one which will mean very little to the individual but is one which in the aggregate will mean a great deal to the Company.

Get the best, the best is KENDRICK'S LINIMENT. DELICATE OPERATION:—Mr. William Black of Newcastle, was operated on at Victoria Hospital yesterday for stricture of the throat by Dr. Atherton, assisted by Dr. McGrath. The patient is resting easily today, but the outcome is in some doubt.—F. I. H. Ad., 20th.

To Cure a Cold in One Day. Take Laxative Bromo Quinine Tablets. All druggists refund the money if it fails to cure. E. W. Grove's signature is on each box. 25c.

Every Lady Should Know. That Ferronine removes the causes that interfere with the proper discharge of all womanly functions; it corrects irregularities and is especially good for women who are nervous and subject to headache, lame back, bearing-down pains, despondency and tiredness. Ferronine is a blood purifier and purifier and can't be excelled for its complexion. For your goods look and health use Ferronine. Price 50c. per box at druggists.

Personal. Mr. Fred. Dyke arrived in Chatham from Liverpool via Boston last Thursday evening and is to remain for several weeks. He is warmly welcomed.

The best wishes of a large number of friends and acquaintances are with Mr. James Nowlan, mate of the Miramichi Steam Navigation Company's str. "Alexandra" and his bride, Mrs. Josephine Cougib, daughter of the late Michael Cougib, who were married by Rev. H. T. Joyner in the pro Cathedral, Chatham, Tuesday morning. Miss Lizzie Leonard was bridesmaid and Mr. Joseph Cougib brother of the bride, was groomsmen. A wedding breakfast was partaken off by the party and guests at the residence of Mrs. Patrick Murray, sister of the bride. The honeymoon trip was begun on Tuesday morning's day express for the south, and will include, Halifax, St. John and other points in the Maritime provinces.

Smoked, Salt and Canned Meats. 10 Cases Pigs Feet, 1 lb. 50 Cases Corn Beef, 1 lb. 10 " " 2 " 30 " Lobster, 1 lb. and 1 lb. 10 " Boiled Ham, 1 " 5 " Peas 10 " " 2 " 3 " Ox Tongue, 1 lb. 10 " Lunch Tongue, 1 " 3 " " 2 " Potted and Devilled Ham and Tongue, Smoked Rolled Bacon, English Breakfast Bacon, Small and Large Hams and Bologna. 2 Cars American New Heavy Mess Pork. 2 " " Clear Back " 3 " " Plate Beef

DELICATE OPERATION:—Mr. William Black of Newcastle, was operated on at Victoria Hospital yesterday for stricture of the throat by Dr. Atherton, assisted by Dr. McGrath. The patient is resting easily today, but the outcome is in some doubt.—F. I. H. Ad., 20th.

The Richards Will Case. The Richards Will case is again up for hearing this week at Newcastle before Judge of Probate, Sam. Thomson, Esq., K. C. The lawyers present on Tuesday were Attorney-General Pagley, Hon. Mr. Tweedie, Mr. Gregory and Mr. Coy for the interests opposed to the second will and Mr. Powell, Solicitor-General McKinnon and Mr. R. W. McLellan in support.

Personal. Mr. Fred. Dyke arrived in Chatham from Liverpool via Boston last Thursday evening and is to remain for several weeks. He is warmly welcomed.

The author of this book traces the ancestry of those who are now called Tweedie or Tweedy back to the men of Norman, Flemish or Saxon blood who in the reign of King David I, 1124, crossed the border of Northumbria and Selkirk along the upper stretches of the Tweed. It was from this first person thus distinguished being mentioned in the reign of Alexander II, (1214) as Johannes de Tweeda, whose name being interpreted into less stately vernacular is simply John of the Tweed, or John Tweedie. In the reign of Alexander III. (1249) this John Tweedie is recorded as having obtained a charter under the name of John de Tweedy, which approximately more closely to modern appellation. Early in the fourteenth century—probably in the reign of David II—we find a Roger Tweedie marrying the eldest daughter of Sir William Fraser, and the Tweedie family gained possession of their most important estates, Drummelzier and Oliver, though the original stronghold of the clan is supposed by some to be Tinnies Castle, not far from Drummelzier. Of Tinnies only a few fragments survive. Drummelzier still exists in a reconstructed form, dating back to the 15th century, while Oliver Castle has vanished, though near the site was built by Thomas Tweedie in 1780 the present House of Oliver, which has incorporated into its walls many of the old carved stones from the Tweedie or Tweedy residence—some of them castles, associated with the name of Tweedie are Fraid, Noidpath, Wrae, Dreas, Halmyre, Kingledore, Patervan, Heartstaircase, Quarter, Ruchan, Hopkatie and Hall Manor—a list of which might be extended still further were it necessary. Into the detailed genealogical affiliations of the various branches of the clan as a whole, the author has found it impossible to enter. In an appendix, however, he gives more or less complete pedigrees of seventeen families bearing the name of Tweedie. The bulk of the book is taken up with various incidents and details in which figure many of those bearing the name of Tweedie—their inter-marriages with the Douglases, the Cockburns, the Kerrs, etc., their feuds with the Cockburns, the Fergusons, the McNameys, and the Vetches, and in addition numerous curious and entertaining items well illustrating the social and moral peculiarities of the times, the most noteworthy, perhaps, to readers of the present day being the implication of William and Adam Tweedie in the assassination of Rizzio. Early in the sixteenth century one George Tweedie migrated to England and settled in Essex Co., descendants of his being found later in Yorkshire, Bedfordshire and Kent. Of more interest to provincial readers is the Irish branch of the family, descended from an officer of Tweedie's, Scotland, who served under William of Orange in his Irish campaign and settled in County Leitrim, where he had received a grant of lands. His great grandson, Joseph Tweedie, had a family of seven, one of whom, a daughter, married in Ireland; two other daughters married in Scotland and Canada not specified, and three sons and a daughter established themselves in the north of New Brunswick. Many of their descendants subsequently moved to the United States. The oldest of the family, Robert, had as his eldest child Joseph, the father of Premier Tweedie. Three other of Robert's sons were the Rev. William Tweedie, the Rev. Robert Tweedie and the Rev. James Tweedie, respected ministers of the Methodist church. William was the father of Prof. W. M. Tweedie, of Mt. Allison, and Robert the father of the late L. B. Tweedie, barrister-at-law, of Hampton. The Tweedie coat-of-arms, as found in the list of Scottish arms made by Sir David Lindsay, Lord Lyons, in 1542, is technically described as "argent a eagle crested gules a chief azure. That is, as it appears to the eye, a white ground, having a broad blue band across the top, and in the lower part a red St. Andrew's cross with scalloped edges. The motto is a good one—"Thou and I think," varying in some cases to "Thou and I think on," which is, being interpreted, "Endure, bear up and keep up a steady thinking."

The wedding of Douglas McEachern to Miss Maude Stuenkel at St. Ann's church Wednesday at 7:30 o'clock was so largely attended that the church could not hold a great many of those who wished to witness the ceremony.

On Thursday last, at Moncton some interesting evidence was given in the case of Sten. Wilbur, charged with stealing a watch from D. H. Ribbles, which was investigated before the police magistrate. It came out during examination of complaint and accused that they had been on a trip to Campbellton to witness a certain party in a poker game. Wilbur stated that his expenses were paid by Ribbles on condition that the latter was to have fifty per cent. of the winnings of the game. It was further stated that Wilbur and Ribbles had made a similar trip to St. John and had cleared up between them $25 and $30. Accused swore he bought the watch from Ribbles, but Magistrate J. J. demised the information and ordered the watch returned to Ribbles.

DELICATE OPERATION:—Mr. William Black of Newcastle, was operated on at Victoria Hospital yesterday for stricture of the throat by Dr. Atherton, assisted by Dr. McGrath. The patient is resting easily today, but the outcome is in some doubt.—F. I. H. Ad., 20th.

United Workmen Order Disrupted. A Boston despatch of last Thursday says:— "A movement started some years ago to change the method of assessment from the flat rate, as mentioned at a meeting of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts and the Ancient Order of United Workmen, last night, in the adoption of a resolution to sever all connection with the Supreme Lodge of the United States. Representative John Symonds of Mystic Lodge, Lynn, presented the resolution which declared that the grand lodge should pay the guaranty up to and including Dec. 31, 1903, after which all connection with the Supreme Lodge should cease, the Grand Lodge to pay no further guaranty fund.

Personal. Mr. Fred. Dyke arrived in Chatham from Liverpool via Boston last Thursday evening and is to remain for several weeks. He is warmly welcomed.

The author of this book traces the ancestry of those who are now called Tweedie or Tweedy back to the men of Norman, Flemish or Saxon blood who in the reign of King David I, 1124, crossed the border of Northumbria and Selkirk along the upper stretches of the Tweed. It was from this first person thus distinguished being mentioned in the reign of Alexander II, (1214) as Johannes de Tweeda, whose name being interpreted into less stately vernacular is simply John of the Tweed, or John Tweedie. In the reign of Alexander III. (1249) this John Tweedie is recorded as having obtained a charter under the name of John de Tweedy, which approximately more closely to modern appellation. Early in the fourteenth century—probably in the reign of David II—we find a Roger Tweedie marrying the eldest daughter of Sir William Fraser, and the Tweedie family gained possession of their most important estates, Drummelzier and Oliver, though the original stronghold of the clan is supposed by some to be Tinnies Castle, not far from Drummelzier. Of Tinnies only a few fragments survive. Drummelzier still exists in a reconstructed form, dating back to the 15th century, while Oliver Castle has vanished, though near the site was built by Thomas Tweedie in 1780 the present House of Oliver, which has incorporated into its walls many of the old carved stones from the Tweedie or Tweedy residence—some of them castles, associated with the name of Tweedie are Fraid, Noidpath, Wrae, Dreas, Halmyre, Kingledore, Patervan, Heartstaircase, Quarter, Ruchan, Hopkatie and Hall Manor—a list of which might be extended still further were it necessary. Into the detailed genealogical affiliations of the various branches of the clan as a whole, the author has found it impossible to enter. In an appendix, however, he gives more or less complete pedigrees of seventeen families bearing the name of Tweedie. The bulk of the book is taken up with various incidents and details in which figure many of those bearing the name of Tweedie—their inter-marriages with the Douglases, the Cockburns, the Kerrs, etc., their feuds with the Cockburns, the Fergusons, the McNameys, and the Vetches, and in addition numerous curious and entertaining items well illustrating the social and moral peculiarities of the times, the most noteworthy, perhaps, to readers of the present day being the implication of William and Adam Tweedie in the assassination of Rizzio. Early in the sixteenth century one George Tweedie migrated to England and settled in Essex Co., descendants of his being found later in Yorkshire, Bedfordshire and Kent. Of more interest to provincial readers is the Irish branch of the family, descended from an officer of Tweedie's, Scotland, who served under William of Orange in his Irish campaign and settled in County Leitrim, where he had received a grant of lands. His great grandson, Joseph Tweedie, had a family of seven, one of whom, a daughter, married in Ireland; two other daughters married in Scotland and Canada not specified, and three sons and a daughter established themselves in the north of New Brunswick. Many of their descendants subsequently moved to the United States. The oldest of the family, Robert, had as his eldest child Joseph, the father of Premier Tweedie. Three other of Robert's sons were the Rev. William Tweedie, the Rev. Robert Tweedie and the Rev. James Tweedie, respected ministers of the Methodist church. William was the father of Prof. W. M. Tweedie, of Mt. Allison, and Robert the father of the late L. B. Tweedie, barrister-at-law, of Hampton. The Tweedie coat-of-arms, as found in the list of Scottish arms made by Sir David Lindsay, Lord Lyons, in 1542, is technically described as "argent a eagle crested gules a chief azure. That is, as it appears to the eye, a white ground, having a broad blue band across the top, and in the lower part a red St. Andrew's cross with scalloped edges. The motto is a good one—"Thou and I think," varying in some cases to "Thou and I think on," which is, being interpreted, "Endure, bear up and keep up a steady thinking."

The wedding of Douglas McEachern to Miss Maude Stuenkel at St. Ann's church Wednesday at 7:30 o'clock was so largely attended that the church could not hold a great many of those who wished to witness the ceremony.

Every Day Accidents. Burns, bites, stings, cuts and bruises all cause inflammation. Johnson's Anodyne Liniment cures inflammation. When the wounded spot is tingling with pain it is hard to have to wait for relief. So buy a bottle of Johnson's Anodyne Liniment to-day and you will be prepared for the worst. For ninety years it has been a household remedy. No other liniment ever had such a long, thorough trial and no remedy such popularity as Johnson's Anodyne Liniment. It is equally good for internal as for external use—dissolve it in water, in a teaspoon. Sold in two size bottles, 25c. and 50c. The larger is more economical. Write for a free copy of "Treatment for Diseases and Care of the Sick Room." L. S. JOHNSON & CO., 22 Crown House Street, Boston, Mass.

DELICATE OPERATION:—Mr. William Black of Newcastle, was operated on at Victoria Hospital yesterday for stricture of the throat by Dr. Atherton, assisted by Dr. McGrath. The patient is resting easily today, but the outcome is in some doubt.—F. I. H. Ad., 20th.

United Workmen Order Disrupted. A Boston despatch of last Thursday says:— "A movement started some years ago to change the method of assessment from the flat rate, as mentioned at a meeting of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts and the Ancient Order of United Workmen, last night, in the adoption of a resolution to sever all connection with the Supreme Lodge of the United States. Representative John Symonds of Mystic Lodge, Lynn, presented the resolution which declared that the grand lodge should pay the guaranty up to and including Dec. 31, 1903, after which all connection with the Supreme Lodge should cease, the Grand Lodge to pay no further guaranty fund.

Personal. Mr. Fred. Dyke arrived in Chatham from Liverpool via Boston last Thursday evening and is to remain for several weeks. He is warmly welcomed.

The author of this book traces the ancestry of those who are now called Tweedie or Tweedy back to the men of Norman, Flemish or Saxon blood who in the reign of King David I, 1124, crossed the border of Northumbria and Selkirk along the upper stretches of the Tweed. It was from this first person thus distinguished being mentioned in the reign of Alexander II, (1214) as Johannes de Tweeda, whose name being interpreted into less stately vernacular is simply John of the Tweed, or John Tweedie. In the reign of Alexander III. (1249) this John Tweedie is recorded as having obtained a charter under the name of John de Tweedy, which approximately more closely to modern appellation. Early in the fourteenth century—probably in the reign of David II—we find a Roger Tweedie marrying the eldest daughter of Sir William Fraser, and the Tweedie family gained possession of their most important estates, Drummelzier and Oliver, though the original stronghold of the clan is supposed by some to be Tinnies Castle, not far from Drummelzier. Of Tinnies only a few fragments survive. Drummelzier still exists in a reconstructed form, dating back to the 15th century, while Oliver Castle has vanished, though near the site was built by Thomas Tweedie in 1780 the present House of Oliver, which has incorporated into its walls many of the old carved stones from the Tweedie or Tweedy residence—some of them castles, associated with the name of Tweedie are Fraid, Noidpath, Wrae, Dreas, Halmyre, Kingledore, Patervan, Heartstaircase, Quarter, Ruchan, Hopkatie and Hall Manor—a list of which might be extended still further were it necessary. Into the detailed genealogical affiliations of the various branches of the clan as a whole, the author has found it impossible to enter. In an appendix, however, he gives more or less complete pedigrees of seventeen families bearing the name of Tweedie. The bulk of the book is taken up with various incidents and details in which figure many of those bearing the name of Tweedie—their inter-marriages with the Douglases, the Cockburns, the Kerrs, etc., their feuds with the Cockburns, the Fergusons, the McNameys, and the Vetches, and in addition numerous curious and entertaining items well illustrating the social and moral peculiarities of the times, the most noteworthy, perhaps, to readers of the present day being the implication of William and Adam Tweedie in the assassination of Rizzio. Early in the sixteenth century one George Tweedie migrated to England and settled in Essex Co., descendants of his being found later in Yorkshire, Bedfordshire and Kent. Of more interest to provincial readers is the Irish branch of the family, descended from an officer of Tweedie's, Scotland, who served under William of Orange in his Irish campaign and settled in County Leitrim, where he had received a grant of lands. His great grandson, Joseph Tweedie, had a family of seven, one of whom, a daughter, married in Ireland; two other daughters married in Scotland and Canada not specified, and three sons and a daughter established themselves in the north of New Brunswick. Many of their descendants subsequently moved to the United States. The oldest of the family, Robert, had as his eldest child Joseph, the father of Premier Tweedie. Three other of Robert's sons were the Rev. William Tweedie, the Rev. Robert Tweedie and the Rev. James Tweedie, respected ministers of the Methodist church. William was the father of Prof. W. M. Tweedie, of Mt. Allison, and Robert the father of the late L. B. Tweedie, barrister-at-law, of Hampton. The Tweedie coat-of-arms, as found in the list of Scottish arms made by Sir David Lindsay, Lord Lyons, in 1542, is technically described as "argent a eagle crested gules a chief azure. That is, as it appears to the eye, a white ground, having a broad blue band across the top, and in the lower part a red St. Andrew's cross with scalloped edges. The motto is a good one—"Thou and I think," varying in some cases to "Thou and I think on," which is, being interpreted, "Endure, bear up and keep up a steady thinking."

The wedding of Douglas McEachern to Miss Maude Stuenkel at St. Ann's church Wednesday at 7:30 o'clock was so largely attended that the church could not hold a great many of those who wished to witness the ceremony.

Yacht for Sale. DON'T WAIT till the days get shorter and the weather colder, BUT SIT FOR YOUR PHOTOS NOW. J. Y. Mersereau.

DELICATE OPERATION:—Mr. William Black of Newcastle, was operated on at Victoria Hospital yesterday for stricture of the throat by Dr. Atherton, assisted by Dr. McGrath. The patient is resting easily today, but the outcome is in some doubt.—F. I. H. Ad., 20th.

United Workmen Order Disrupted. A Boston despatch of last Thursday says:— "A movement started some years ago to change the method of assessment from the flat rate, as mentioned at a meeting of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts and the Ancient Order of United Workmen, last night, in the adoption of a resolution to sever all connection with the Supreme Lodge of the United States. Representative John Symonds of Mystic Lodge, Lynn, presented the resolution which declared that the grand lodge should pay the guaranty up to and including Dec. 31, 1903, after which all connection with the Supreme Lodge should cease, the Grand Lodge to pay no further guaranty fund.

Personal. Mr. Fred. Dyke arrived in Chatham from Liverpool via Boston last Thursday evening and is to remain for several weeks. He is warmly welcomed.

The author of this book traces the ancestry of those who are now called Tweedie or Tweedy back to the men of Norman, Flemish or Saxon blood who in the reign of King David I, 1124, crossed the border of Northumbria and Selkirk along the upper stretches of the Tweed. It was from this first person thus distinguished being mentioned in the reign of Alexander II, (1214) as Johannes de Tweeda, whose name being interpreted into less stately vernacular is simply John of the Tweed, or John Tweedie. In the reign of Alexander III. (1249) this John Tweedie is recorded as having obtained a charter under the name of John de Tweedy, which approximately more closely to modern appellation. Early in the fourteenth century—probably in the reign of David II—we find a Roger Tweedie marrying the eldest daughter of Sir William Fraser, and the Tweedie family gained possession of their most important estates, Drummelzier and Oliver, though the original stronghold of the clan is supposed by some to be Tinnies Castle, not far from Drummelzier. Of Tinnies only a few fragments survive. Drummelzier still exists in a reconstructed form, dating back to the 15th century, while Oliver Castle has vanished, though near the site was built by Thomas Tweedie in 1780 the present House of Oliver, which has incorporated into its walls many of the old carved stones from the Tweedie or Tweedy residence—some of them castles, associated with the name of Tweedie are Fraid, Noidpath, Wrae, Dreas, Halmyre, Kingledore, Patervan, Heartstaircase, Quarter, Ruchan, Hopkatie and Hall Manor—a list of which might be extended still further were it necessary. Into the detailed genealogical affiliations of the various branches of the clan as a whole, the author has found it impossible to enter. In an appendix, however, he gives more or less complete pedigrees of seventeen families bearing the name of Tweedie. The bulk of the book is taken up with various incidents and details in which figure many of those bearing the name of Tweedie—their inter-marriages with the Douglases, the Cockburns, the Kerrs, etc., their feuds with the Cockburns, the Fergusons, the McNameys, and the Vetches, and in addition numerous curious and entertaining items well illustrating the social and moral peculiarities of the times, the most noteworthy, perhaps, to readers of the present day being the implication of William and Adam Tweedie in the assassination of Rizzio. Early in the sixteenth century one George Tweedie migrated to England and settled in Essex Co., descendants of his being found later in Yorkshire, Bedfordshire and Kent. Of more interest to provincial readers is the Irish branch of the family, descended from an officer of Tweedie's, Scotland, who served under William of Orange in his Irish campaign and settled in County Leitrim, where he had received a grant of lands. His great grandson, Joseph Tweedie, had a family of seven, one of whom, a daughter, married in Ireland; two other daughters married in Scotland and Canada not specified, and three sons and a daughter established themselves in the north of New Brunswick. Many of their descendants subsequently moved to the United States. The oldest of the family, Robert, had as his eldest child Joseph, the father of Premier Tweedie. Three other of Robert's sons were the Rev. William Tweedie, the Rev. Robert Tweedie and the Rev. James Tweedie, respected ministers of the Methodist church. William was the father of Prof. W. M. Tweedie, of Mt. Allison, and Robert the father of the late L. B. Tweedie, barrister-at-law, of Hampton. The Tweedie coat-of-arms, as found in the list of Scottish arms made by Sir David Lindsay, Lord Lyons, in 1542, is technically described as "argent a eagle crested gules a chief azure. That is, as it appears to the eye, a white ground, having a broad blue band across the top, and in the lower part a red St. Andrew's cross with scalloped edges. The motto is a good one—"Thou and I think," varying in some cases to "Thou and I think on," which is, being interpreted, "Endure, bear up and keep up a steady thinking."

The wedding of Douglas McEachern to Miss Maude Stuenkel at St. Ann's church Wednesday at 7:30 o'clock was so largely attended that the church could not hold a great many of those who wished to witness the ceremony.

Yacht for Sale. DON'T WAIT till the days get shorter and the weather colder, BUT SIT FOR YOUR PHOTOS NOW. J. Y. Mersereau.

DELICATE OPERATION:—Mr. William Black of Newcastle, was operated on at Victoria Hospital yesterday for stricture of the throat by Dr. Atherton, assisted by Dr. McGrath. The patient is resting easily today, but the outcome is in some doubt.—F. I. H. Ad., 20th.

United Workmen Order Disrupted. A Boston despatch of last Thursday says:— "A movement started some years ago to change the method of assessment from the flat rate, as mentioned at a meeting of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts and the Ancient Order of United Workmen, last night, in the adoption of a resolution to sever all connection with the Supreme Lodge of the United States. Representative John Symonds of Mystic Lodge, Lynn, presented the resolution which declared that the grand lodge should pay the guaranty up to and including Dec. 31, 1903, after which all connection with the Supreme Lodge should cease, the Grand Lodge to pay no further guaranty fund.

Personal. Mr. Fred. Dyke arrived in Chatham from Liverpool via Boston last Thursday evening and is to remain for several weeks. He is warmly welcomed.

The author of this book traces the ancestry of those who are now called Tweedie or Tweedy back to the men of Norman, Flemish or Saxon blood who in the reign of King David I, 1124, crossed the border of Northumbria and Selkirk along the upper stretches of the Tweed. It was from this first person thus distinguished being mentioned in the reign of Alexander II, (1214) as Johannes de Tweeda, whose name being interpreted into less stately vernacular is simply John of the Tweed, or John Tweedie. In the reign of Alexander III. (1249) this John Tweedie is recorded as having obtained a charter under the name of John de Tweedy, which approximately more closely to modern appellation. Early in the fourteenth century—probably in the reign of David II—we find a Roger Tweedie marrying the eldest daughter of Sir William Fraser, and the Tweedie family gained possession of their most important estates, Drummelzier and Oliver, though the original stronghold of the clan is supposed by some to be Tinnies Castle, not far from Drummelzier. Of Tinnies only a few fragments survive. Drummelzier still exists in a reconstructed form, dating back to the 15th century, while Oliver Castle has vanished, though near the site was built by Thomas Tweedie in 1780 the present House of Oliver, which has incorporated into its walls many of the old carved stones from the Tweedie or Tweedy residence—some of them castles, associated with the name of Tweedie are Fraid, Noidpath, Wrae, Dreas, Halmyre, Kingledore, Patervan, Heartstaircase, Quarter, Ruchan, Hopkatie and Hall Manor—a list of which might be extended still further were it necessary. Into the detailed genealogical affiliations of the various branches of the clan as a whole, the author has found it impossible to enter. In an appendix, however, he gives more or less complete pedigrees of seventeen families bearing the name of Tweedie. The bulk of the book is taken up with various incidents and details in which figure many of those bearing the name of Tweedie—their inter-marriages with the Douglases, the Cockburns, the Kerrs, etc., their feuds with the Cockburns, the Fergusons, the McNameys, and the Vetches, and in addition numerous curious and entertaining items well illustrating the social and moral peculiarities of the times, the most noteworthy, perhaps, to readers of the present day being the implication of William and Adam Tweedie in the assassination of Rizzio. Early in the sixteenth century one George Tweedie migrated to England and settled in Essex Co., descendants of his being found later in Yorkshire, Bedfordshire and Kent. Of more interest to provincial readers is the Irish branch of the family, descended from an officer of Tweedie's, Scotland, who served under William of Orange in his Irish campaign and settled in County Leitrim, where he had received a grant of lands. His great grandson, Joseph Tweedie, had a family of seven, one of whom, a daughter, married in Ireland; two other daughters married in Scotland and Canada not specified, and three sons and a daughter established themselves in the north of New Brunswick. Many of their descendants subsequently moved to the United States. The oldest of the family, Robert, had as his eldest child Joseph, the father of Premier Tweedie. Three other of Robert's sons were the Rev. William Tweedie, the Rev. Robert Tweedie and the Rev. James Tweedie, respected ministers of the Methodist church. William was the father of Prof. W. M. Tweedie, of Mt. Allison, and Robert the father of the late L. B. Tweedie, barrister-at-law, of Hampton. The Tweedie coat-of-arms, as found in the list of Scottish arms made by Sir David Lindsay, Lord Lyons, in 1542, is technically described as "argent a eagle crested gules a chief azure. That is, as it appears to the eye, a white ground, having a broad blue band across the top, and in the lower part a red St. Andrew's cross with scalloped edges. The motto is a good one—"Thou and I think," varying in some cases to "Thou and I think on," which is, being interpreted, "Endure, bear up and keep up a steady thinking."

The wedding of Douglas McEachern to Miss Maude Stuenkel at St. Ann's church Wednesday at 7:30 o'clock was so largely attended that the church could not hold a great many of those who wished to witness the ceremony.

Yacht for Sale. DON'T WAIT till the days get shorter and the weather colder, BUT SIT FOR YOUR PHOTOS NOW. J. Y. Mersereau.

DELICATE OPERATION:—Mr. William Black of Newcastle, was operated on at Victoria Hospital yesterday for stricture of the throat by Dr. Atherton, assisted by Dr. McGrath. The patient is resting easily today, but the outcome is in some doubt.—F. I. H. Ad., 20th.

United Workmen Order Disrupted. A Boston despatch of last Thursday says:— "A movement started some years ago to change the method of assessment from the flat rate, as mentioned at a meeting of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts and the Ancient Order of United Workmen, last night, in the adoption of a resolution to sever all connection with the Supreme Lodge of the United States. Representative John Symonds of Mystic Lodge, Lynn, presented the resolution which declared that the grand lodge should pay the guaranty up to and including Dec. 31, 1903, after which all connection with the Supreme Lodge should cease, the Grand Lodge to pay no further guaranty fund.

Personal. Mr. Fred. Dyke arrived in Chatham from Liverpool via Boston last Thursday evening and is to remain for several weeks. He is warmly welcomed.

The author of this book traces the ancestry of those who are now called Tweedie or Tweedy back to the men of Norman, Flemish or Saxon blood who in the reign of King David I, 1124, crossed the border of Northumbria and Selkirk along the upper stretches of the Tweed. It was from this first person thus distinguished being mentioned in the reign of Alexander II, (1214) as Johannes de Tweeda, whose name being interpreted into less stately vernacular is simply John of the Tweed, or John Tweedie. In the reign of Alexander III. (1249) this John Tweedie is recorded as having obtained a charter under the name of John de Tweedy, which approximately more closely to modern appellation. Early in the fourteenth century—probably in the reign of David II—we find a Roger Tweedie marrying the eldest daughter of Sir William Fraser, and the Tweedie family gained possession of their most important estates, Drummelzier and Oliver, though the original stronghold of the clan is supposed by some to be Tinnies Castle, not far from Drummelzier. Of Tinnies only a few fragments survive. Drummelzier still exists in a reconstructed form, dating back to the 15th century, while Oliver Castle has vanished, though near the site was built by Thomas Tweedie in 1780 the present House of Oliver, which has incorporated into its walls many of the old carved stones from the Tweedie or Tweedy residence—some of them castles, associated with the name of Tweedie are Fraid, Noidpath, Wrae, Dreas, Halmyre, Kingledore, Patervan, Heartstaircase, Quarter, Ruchan, Hopkatie and Hall Manor—a list of which might be extended still further were it necessary. Into the detailed genealogical affiliations of the various branches of the clan as a whole, the author has found it impossible to enter. In an appendix, however, he gives more or less complete pedigrees of seventeen families bearing the name of Tweedie. The bulk of the book is taken up with various incidents and details in which figure many of those bearing the name of Tweedie—their inter-marriages with the Douglases, the Cockburns, the Kerrs, etc., their feuds with the Cockburns, the Fergusons, the McNameys, and the Vetches, and in addition numerous curious and entertaining items well illustrating the social and moral peculiarities of the times, the most noteworthy, perhaps, to readers of the present day being the implication of William and Adam Tweedie in the assassination of Rizzio. Early in the sixteenth century one George Tweedie migrated to England and settled in Essex Co., descendants of his being found later in Yorkshire, Bedfordshire and Kent. Of more interest to provincial readers is the Irish branch of the family, descended from an officer of Tweedie's, Scotland, who served under William of Orange in his Irish campaign and settled in County Leitrim, where he had received a grant of lands. His great grandson, Joseph Tweedie, had a family of seven, one of whom, a daughter, married in Ireland; two other daughters married in Scotland and Canada not specified, and three sons and a daughter established themselves in the north of New Brunswick. Many of their descendants subsequently moved to the United States. The oldest of the family, Robert, had as his eldest child Joseph, the father of Premier Tweedie. Three other of Robert's sons were the Rev. William Tweedie, the Rev. Robert Tweedie and the Rev. James Tweedie, respected ministers of the Methodist church. William was the father of Prof. W. M. Tweedie, of Mt. Allison, and Robert the father of the late L. B. Tweedie, barrister-at-law, of Hampton. The Tweedie coat-of-arms, as found in the list of Scottish arms made by Sir David Lindsay, Lord Lyons, in 1542, is technically described as "argent a eagle crested gules a chief azure. That is, as it appears to the eye, a white ground, having a broad blue band across the top, and in the lower part a red St. Andrew's cross with scalloped edges. The motto is a good one—"Thou and I think," varying in some cases to "Thou and I think on," which is, being interpreted, "Endure, bear up and keep up a steady thinking."

The wedding of Douglas McEachern to Miss Maude Stuenkel at St. Ann's church Wednesday at 7:30 o'clock was so largely attended that the church could not hold a great many of those who wished to witness the ceremony.

Yacht for Sale. DON'T WAIT till the days get shorter and the weather colder, BUT SIT FOR YOUR PHOTOS NOW. J. Y. Mersereau.