

THE POOR DYSPPEPTIC.

Is the Most Miserable of Mortals—Only Similar Sufferers Can Understand His Hours of Agony.

There is no mortal more miserable than the poor dyspeptic. He is never healthy, never happy—always ailing, always out of sorts. Every mouthful of food brings hours of distress—every moment of the day is spoiled and soured.

If you are a dyspeptic, you know the signs: the coated tongue, the dull headache, the heartburn, the biliousness, the persistent torment after meals, the hopeless despondency. Any one of these signs points to indigestion.

Had blood in the mother of fifty diseases, and Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will cure them all, because they convert bad blood into good, rich, red blood, without which there can be neither health nor strength.

PERSONAL POINTERS. Notes of Interest About Some Prominent People.

Count Tolstoy's manuscripts are said to be the terror of every proof-reader who has to do with them. Much of his writing being absolutely unintelligible to anyone who has had no previous experience of it.

Mr. T. W. Russell, M. P. for South Tyrone, and an able and energetic member of the House of Commons, is the son of a Scottish stonemason, and commenced his life of hard labor as a boy of ten.

It is always pleasant to have a satisfactory balance on the bank. The man who has a balance on the bank, but not many people can vie in this respect with the Shah of Persia, whose balance does not actually keep his balance at a bank.

The only sailing member of Lord Derby's administration is the Duke of Rutland, who is now in his eighty-fifth year. As Lord John Manners the Duke served two terms as minister of the interior.

In spite of his great age the King of Denmark is still as energetic and only the other day was instrumental in saving the lives of two little children.

Dr. Farrar himself who said that "if ever there was a dead man, it was my first sermon was one." One by one the old men and women left the infirmary chapel at Salisbury Workhouse with his discourse, and his first attempt was anything but promising of the brilliant career which was before him.

BABY'S BEST FRIEND. The best friend baby can have is a simple medicine that will relieve and cure the minor ailments that make his little life often very miserable.

In Peace and War Or, The End of It All

A week later Brenda was sitting in the same apartment again. But this time she was alone. From pure kindness of heart Mrs. Wylie had managed to allow the girl an afternoon's leisure, and Brenda was spending this very happily amidst her books and magazines.

During the last week Alice Huston's presence in Mrs. Wylie's household had not been an unmitigated success. There was a slight air of mystery in the widow's manner, in the infection of her pleasant voice, in her very glance when her eyes rested upon her guest's gracious form.

Brenda was apparently immersed in the pages of an intellectual monthly review, but at times her sweet innocent eyes wandered from the lines and rested meditatively on the glowing fire.

At length she laid her book down, and sat gazing softly into the fire. When she had done this she longed to go to the window, but she never moved.
