Jessie Maclachlan

St. John Telegraph : The Aberdeen Daily Journal of Aug. 24 comes to us with a flattering reference to a lady who is very popular in these provinces, Miss Jessie Maclachlan, the gifted Scottish singer. At an entertainment that crowded the Music Hall of Aberdeen she sang, and the Journal's article is interesting, because some critics here expressed doubt if she were as popular in her own country as on this side. The

"Miss Jessie Maclachlan, the gifted exponent of Scottish song, was enthusiastically eceived on making her first appearance in Aberdeen after her recent tour in Canada and the United States. Never has the popular lady been heard to greater advanage. Her songs were carefully selected, so as to exhibit the sweetness, the tenderness, and the dramatic power that she knows so well how to infuse into her rendering of the national airs; and the general effect was entrancing. "The Aud Scotch Sangs," most expressively and pathetically rendered, was followed, as an encore, by "The Blue B lis of Scotland," given with a verve that was irresistible. Equally effective was the contrast, in the second part of the programme, between the simplicity and tenderness of "The Shepherd's Cradle Song" and the appropriate vigor and spirit characteristic of Miss Maclachlan's rendering of "Blue Bonnets over the Border." response to a peremptory demand, Miss Maclachlan concluded with a Gaelic song one of the songs, if we mistake not, that she
