DR. "WILL'S" PATIENT

Doctor Walker sat alone in his office at the Orthopedic Hospital, one dark, stormy night. Outside, the wind and rain were having it all their own way. The gale swept around the huge building with mad shrieks, like a score of fiends let loose to riot and rejoice in the misery of suffering human souls.

Doctor Walker—he was familiarly known throughout the institution as "Doctor Will"—sat poring over a huge volume upon his table before him, and striving to concentrate his thoughts upon its contents. But he appeared to be out of sorts; he seemed restless and uneasy.

"What is this noise?" he exclaimed, half aloud, closing the book at last and pushing it aside with a weary gesture. "Somebody cannot study, or find interest in his work, now. If I were like some of my interesting nervous patients, I would say that I feel as if something were going to happen."

For there at the half-open door of the office Doctor Will's quick glance had detected one of the night nurses—a pleasant faced, kindly looking woman, who had been long attached to the hospital. She stepped to the threshold and threw the door open.

"Come in," he called, "I have a confession to make." "For there at the half-open door of the office Doctor Will's quick glance had detected one of the night nurses—a pleasant faced, kindly looking woman, who had been long attached to the hospital. She stepped to the threshold and threw the door open.

"Where am I?" faltered the patient. "In the Orthopedic Hospital, sir. You have broken your arm, and were brought here by a cab driver. You are perfectly safe here. Tell me your name, and where shall I send for your friends?"

"Thank you, I am able to pay for it. You will see well, I trust, as soon as possible, Doctor—?" with a slight interrogation. "I am Doctor William Walker, of this hospital. I shall do all in my power for you. It is nothing dangerous, my dear sir, only you must lie at rest. Now, I will give you a sleeping potion, and hope to find you better in the morning." Parke Halton drank the sleeping draught, and almost immediately fell asleep.

Doctor Will sat watching the pale, beautiful face upon the pillow before him with an odd sensation of puzzling with his left vest pocket. "What a spirituelle face for a man—or a boy, rather!" he exclaimed, and he was never so interested in a patient before in his life!

The next morning Parke Halton was much better, and as the days went by grew rapidly stronger. Doctor Will spent more time in the room of his interesting patient than he had ever been known to do before. There seemed some subtle attraction between the two, and at times passed it grew and strengthened.

At last Parke was fully recovered, and in a few days would be discharged from the hospital. One night Kate, the night nurse, was startled by the sound of faint sobbing and stifled weeping. It seemed to come from the end of the long corridor, near the sleeping room of Doctor Will. She hastened softly to the spot, determined to know what was the matter. This is what she saw.

Parke Halton on his knees at the door of the doctor's room, weeping bitterly. Directly, the young man rose to his feet and entered the room, for the physician's door was never locked, but always ready for a hasty summons in the night.

In speechless amazement Kate noticed the young patient steal softly into the bedside and, stooping, place a kiss upon the brow of the sleeping physician; then, weeping bitterly, steal away once more.

One day he received a summons to an up-town mansion; his own lady dying—stricken down by a swift and sudden disease. Arrived at his bedside, Doctor Will saw at once that it was too late to save him; his hours were numbered.

"I have something to tell you," the dying man said feebly. "See that no one is near. Wait! I wish to send for my ward, Leoline Lea." A message was despatched, and in a few moments a young girl entered the room. At sight of her the blood receded from Doctor Will's heart, and he felt as though he must seek to faint. For it was the face of the locket, which Doctor Will even then wore over his heart, and the face of Leoline Lea.

About the House

Men's suits can be renovated so thoroughly and well as to save buying new ones, and as a suit of good quality of cloth is expensive, it is worth while to carry them through the process of cleaning if it is necessary to economize. A coat, vest or pair of pants that is to be cleaned must be well dusted first.

There is a rent that needs mending, set the patch neatly, taking care to match the twill or check, and sew it down so as to make it as nearly invisible as possible, then dampen on the right side and press on the collar is badly soiled lay it on the table and scrub with small brush dipped in strong suds to which a little ammonia has been added and an old tooth brush is excellent to use.

One cannot believe that plants have individual consciousness, and yet their actions show a nice adjustment to environment, reveal a fine intelligence. The intelligence, we must think, is in the whole plant and reveals itself in one way through plant life as it reveals itself in other ways through animal and human life.

A great many people have an idea that every woman knows how to sweep and dust a room properly. And it is not so. The carpet sweeper is a labor-saving article, and even when it is used every day, the carpet will become soiled and discolored.

There is a great deal of difference in the quality of a broom that will last. One that is used every day should be washed once a week. This is done by dipping the broom up and down in it until the straw look clean and new. Rinse well and hang it up until dry. This loosens the straw and it will not break easily.

The long-haired young reformers were holding an informal debate, and the young ladies, who were the most just almost as corrupt and bad a place as it will could be, a grimaced man arose.

There was a dinner-party at the Smiths, and Mrs. S. was desirous of duly impressing her guests. And all night have gone well but for an angry, unburnt-haired little Tommy Smith, who had been allowed at the table on condition that he behaved himself.

Foed Mother (to very busy brother-in-law)—You might look after your little boy. You see that he does not like to eat. He is getting into mischief, and if he cries give him a piece of chocolate—there's some in the dining room; and if that doesn't stop him, run him round the room on your back—he loves it. But on no account let him be a nuisance to you!

A PYTHON AND ITS PREY

Only twenty miles distant from the Liberian capital, I found myself about as remote from civilization as one could wish. I was in the United States, in the town of Monrovia, Liberia, in telling of a hunting trip in the interior of Liberia.

At first supposed was an animal of some kind, possibly an eland, eating the leaves of a tall bush growing by the roadside. I could see the upper branches and leaves of the bush shaking and could also hear the noise of something agitating them.

I stopped, cocked my Winchester and was preparing to await developments when my native hunter tapped me on the shoulder and directed me to look upward into the trees. Instead of the bush, as I did so, I beheld a sight that almost took my breath.

It was not long before a young female goat came in view, and, hearing the noise, pricked up its ears and looked about. It trotted rapidly about the bush, eying it from all sides, as though trying hard to catch a glimpse of what evidently was a mistake for another goat. Each time it drew a little nearer, until finally it made bold to proceed directly up to the bush and under the python, which was on the ground like a flash, seizing it by the neck and wrapping its mighty coils about the poor creature's body.

The steady diner was enjoying himself vastly. "Waiter," he called, "fetch a nice piece of boiled turbot." The dish was obtained, placed before the customer, consumed, and then he called again. "Waiter, fetch a choice portion of curried fow and, oh, waiter, fetch another bottle of wine, please."

THE END OF FINLAND

The czar of Russia last month signed a rescript, that makes the independence of Finland a virtual reality. General Borokoff, non-officially Governor-General, now exercises his personal authority over every department of the grand duchy, and may exercise control over the affairs of the communes or the cities.

Finland is a large island, and the largest snake in the world. It is a member of the snake kind. I met natives who said they had seen and killed pythons thirty and thirty-one feet long, but never saw any that long myself. The python in question measured about seventeen feet in length. I considered it a very large reptile.

BERMUDA MAIDENS. The Reason So Many of Them Decide to Remain Unmarried. In proportion to population there are more old maids in the Bermudas than in any other part of the world. This is true of all classes of the population, but especially of the oldest and wealthiest families, who have been connected with the islands ever since they were colonized by the Virginia company in 1629.

Rustic Work. Sooner or later every owner of a country home runs up against the idea of rustic work. Generally it hits him hard—sometimes too hard. If you really need seats or summer houses in your woodland nothing can be more appropriate than logs with the bark on, because they harmonize with the growing trees, says Country Life in America. This is the rustic work that is the fashion of rustic work, its fitness. It is so opposed to costlier and more architectural features which make a strong contrast with natural surroundings. Occasionally, however, you will find a man who has fallen head over heels in love with rustic work. Generally it hits him hard—sometimes too hard. If you really need seats or summer houses in your woodland nothing can be more appropriate than logs with the bark on, because they harmonize with the growing trees, says Country Life in America.

Wolston speaks of an organ containing 400 pipes which was erected in the tenth century in England. This instrument was blown by "thirteen separate pairs of bellows." It also contained a large key-board. The organ was of that period extant which represent the organ as an instrument having but few pipes, blown by two or three persons and usually performed on by a monk. The keys, which were played upon by hand, were of the first, wood, of lead and from four to six inches broad. About the end of the eleventh century semitones were introduced into the keyboard, but to all appearances its compass did not extend beyond three octaves. The introduction of pedals in 1490 by Bernhard—giving a compass B flat to A—was another important contribution to the instrument. These were merely small pieces of wood operated by the toe of the player.

Dr. Chase's Ointment. The oldest known bookkeeping. In the primitive villages of the Andes, scattered through Peru, Bolivia and Ecuador, the descendants of the ancient Incas depend upon the "kipu" for keeping all their accounts. It was in use when Pizarro conquered Peru, and the Andean Indians have never improved on it. It is the oldest known form of bookkeeping. The "kipu" is simply a collection of knotted strings. Differently colored strings denote different articles in daily use and ten distinct knots the ten numerals. In the absence of a written language it is a marvelously perfect system. Large transactions are made and accounted for by it as if double entry bookkeeping were employed.

Value of Recreation. There are wisdom and strength in genuine pastime. One often accomplishes more by spending a pleasant evening in the open air than by poring over books with tired brain and exhausted body. He may have had qualms of conscience about it and thought that evenings given to social enjoyment were pure waste of time. The life, far from it! To better enjoy the dream of was the time employed. Body and mind were strengthening and, unconsciously, without effort, he fitted for better work in the future.—Success.

Why He Objected. He-I wouldn't want any one to marry me out of pity. She-But they say pity is akin to love. He-Well, I never could stand for poor relations.—Brooklyn Life.

Don't break down a boy's pluck with a broomstick. There is a better way. You cannot educate the mind with a club.—Schoolmaster. Wife (standing with her husband before shop window)—Here are so many things that would give pleasure to your wife, and that you might purchase for her, but, no matter how many beautiful things there are, you seem quite indifferent, as though you saw nothing. Husband—A sure proof of my affection for you, for love is blind. "Did you hear that there was a skeleton in Smith's family?" asked Jones. "No, don't say so!" exclaimed the other. "I am on the side of Smith," replied Jones. And then he chuckled idiotically.

Was Cured of Piles Seven Years Ago

A Chronic Case of Twenty Years' Standing Cured Permanently by DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT.

Piles or hemorrhoids are among the most common as well as the most disturbing ailments that afflict humanity. The keen distress caused by the itching, especially when the body gets warm, is almost beyond the power of description. The very mention of Piles suggests Dr. Chase's Ointment as the only actual cure for this loathsome disease. If you ask your doctor, your druggist or your friends what to use for piles they will in nine cases out of ten advise Dr. Chase's Ointment. Mr. Alex. McLaughlin, for 30 years a resident of Bowmanville, Ont., writes: "For twenty long years I suffered from itching piles, and only persons who have been troubled with that annoying disease can imagine what I endured during that time. About seven years ago I asked a druggist if he had anything to cure me. He said that Dr. Chase's Ointment was most favorably spoken of, and on his recommendation I took a box. After three applications I felt better, and by the time I had used one box I was on a fair way to recovery. I continued the treatment until thoroughly cured, and I have not suffered any since. I am firmly convinced that the ointment made a perfect cure of my piles. I consider Dr. Chase's Ointment an invaluable treatment for piles. In my case I think the cure was remarkable when you consider that I am getting on in years, and have been so long a sufferer from this disease. Dr. Chase's Ointment is the only absolute cure of piles. It has a record of cures unparalleled in the history of medicine. 60 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmondson, Bates and Co., Toronto. To protect you against imitations the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous rectal doctor, are on every box.
