The Viscount is the eldest son and heir of the Earl of Albemarle, is unmarried, twenty-three years of age, and good-lookin , like most of the Keppels, and far from rich, says the Marquise de Fontency. He is a nephew of the Hon. Geo. and Mrs. Keppel, and it is by no means improbable that he may seek a rich b ide on this side of the Atlantic. Colonel Hanbury Williams is, of course, a much older man, and is ma ried to an immensely rich wife, who is also very clever and tactful. When Lord Milner was governor of Cape Colony and High Commissioner of South Africa, both during the war and the period that immediately preceded it, the colonel acted as his military Secretary, Mrs. Hanbury Williams who did the honors at Government House for him.

The colonel was specially designated by the King for the post of military attache to the British Embassy at Paris, but the appointment was cancelled at the request of the French Government and military authorities, who objected to it in consequence of the fact that Mrs. Hanbury Williams, who was a Miss Annie Reiss of Manchester, belonged to the Hebrew race. among military men in France and also in fact that Mrs. Hanbury Williams was a Jewess would give rise to difficulties. King Edward, who entertains no predudice whatsoever with regard to the Hebrew e ee, and who cannot understand intolerance of that kind, not only endeavored to a one for the affront by inviting Colonel and Mr. Mrs. Hanbury Williams to Balmoral, but like vise directly interested himself in their future. Indeed, it is understood that Lord Grey has chosen C lonel Hanbury Williams as his Military Secretary in Canada at the suggestion of King E ward.

The Smelt was not then the big factor in the fresh fish business it has since become. No fishermen had yet suspected that the little silvery dainty was moving in thousands of tons Declaration Court was opened on Tuesday daily in the early winter up and down the at Newcastle at 11 o'clock by Sheriff Miramichi past Chatham and Loggieville O'Brien, and polling officially declared as with every tide. It was thought that their habitat at that season was the smaller rivers flowing into the Miramichi-the Napan, Black, Bay du Vin and Tabusintac. When the Intercolonial was opened the smelt was in great demand for shipment to the United States market. The Napan fishermen began crowding each other from the Murphy Bridge downwards and it was at one time necessary for the then Inspector -Mr. Venning-the overseer, Mr. Amos Perley, the writer and some others to go to that locality and make peace amongst the hardy bag-net toilers. The Inspector declared that the bag nets must be stopped from fishing smelts. He said these little fish were the food of the deep sea and coast fishes -- the cod, the halibut, the haddock and ling-and that the destructive bag net would exterminate them; then good bye to all the other fisheries-even the salmon. Wiser counsels prevailed, however, for the bag net had come to stay The smaller rivers could not accommodate them all and as they pushed down to the main river still finding the fish, they were encouraged to go out even to the ship channel, and there they found more and better fishing. bag nets were enlarged and, instead dozen or two which were operated in the minor streams, there were, in a year or two hundreds of them under license and
