Publisher's Notice.

The publisher desires to urge upon the notice of all who wish to contribute matter of any kind to the ADVANCE's columnswhether it be advertising, news or notices of meetings, etc .- that the paper goes to press on Wednesday afternoons and, to ensure publication, their favors should be in the office not later than Wednesday morning.

The printing of the paper is frequently delayed by persons who hold back accounts of meetings, announcements of entertainments, etc., which they might easily send in days before that on which we go to press, but they seem to consult only their own convenience and often place them in our hands on Wednesday after the paper is made ready for press, and seem to think it a hard up because they do not appear ; and, in most cases of this kind, the contributions are really free list advertisements. We want to help every deserving organization in the community, freely, in every legitimate way, but must expect them not to delay the publication of the paper when they wish to make use of our columns. Send your matter for the ADVANCE along on Monday or Tuesday, but don't hold it back until Wednesday you can possibly avoid doing so.

Smallpox at Newcastle

A case of smallpox has been found in the house of James Ryan. His son, William Ryan, who has been for some time Portland, Me., arrived home last Tuesday. He became ill last Monday, and a physician was not called until Sunday. Doctor Nicholson pronounced the disease smallpox. The Board of Health has ordered all the town schools and the convent closed until father notice. A guard has been placed on the house, and all efforts are being taken to prevent the spread of the disease.

Guides Who Should be put out of Commission

The annual meeting of the New Brunswick Guides' Association, which was to have been held Tuesday night of last week. did not come off, the reason given being the non-arrival of some of the members. In an interview with the Fredericton Gleaner, Henry Braithwaite, the veteran guide, made some serious charges against the members of the organization. He left them last year, the reason for which action on his part being that he found that the members of the association were breaking the very laws they were supposed to protect, by night shooting, and allowing sportsmen to kill more game than they were legally entitled to. Besides these charges, he says, the rules were broken by trespassing on other guides' ground and by some of the members if they

The removal of foul gases, and a constant supply of fresh heating area: it is distributed evenly and air, is just as necessary to the thrift of cattle | without drafts; it is liberated at the heads as food: and yet, the best means of bringing this about remains, to a great extent, an unsolved problem. I do not think I have farm buildings. The requirements of a good system of ventilation are :-(1) A constant change of air in the stable. (2) The introduction and distribution of vet seen an ideal system of ventilation for fresh air without drafts. (3) The liberation of the fresh air at the window near the heads of the cattle in such a manner that they may breath it before it is diluted with foul gases. (4) The removal of foul air without condensation and consequent dripping. There is a striking similarity in many respects between a stable and a furnace. Mr. Jas. Johnston was of the opinion that | The necessity for drafts in a furnace arise from the fact that in the process of combustion, oxygen is being continuously used up. and carbonic acid and other gases given off gases given off in the process of combustion are warmer than the elements entering into it, and they rise in obedience to natural after the general meeting, the following laws, until they are cooled to about the temperature of the surrounding air. When this temperature is reached, they tend to diffuse and mix with the atmosphere. So it is in the stable.

These lead into the managers, and are placed closed against the parting blocks, their open ends being prevented from plugging with dirt by a leather flip, or some other device. The foul air is carried off by means of ventilating shafts, leading from the ceiling of the stable out through the roof. Most farmers new run the purlise post straight from the floor to the purline. Beside these posts is a very convenient place for the ventilating flues, they are out of the way, and they are not so readily chilled as when place i against the side of the barn. ridge of the barn. If they are not carried ing public.

It will be seen by this method, the fresh air is admitted, as in the furnace, below the of the cattle, giving them a chance to use it before it has been diluted with the poisonous gases of the stable; as it is heated by inhalation, and by the heat radiating from the bodies of the animals, convection currents are sent up towards the ceiling; and out through the foul air shafts. This system is automatic in its action; the more stock in the stable, the stronger the convection current, and the more fresh air
