PRESSURE SMOKELESS cartridge. This size uses a 165-grain builet and has a velocity of over 2,000 feet per second, making it the most powerful cartridge made for an American arm, with the exception of the .30-40 U.S. Army.
It is sufficiently deadly for any game known in North America.
Another great advantage is that the barrels are bored and rifled (but not chambered) exactly the same as the barre's are bored and rifled (but not chambered) exactly the same as the regular .32-40 Marlin, one turn in 16 inches. This makes the use of black powder and lead bullets as natisfactory and convenient as in a regular black powder rifle.

This size is the first high-presume arm developed in this country for a caliber larger than .30, and the first to use a slow enough twist to give heat results with black powder ammentation.

In his attitude to the civil power Earl Dundo aid seems to be of the class of men of whom autocrats are made. He would, in order to carry out his own ideas, subvert the whole system of responsible government of the count y. Perhaps he would say that he had no such intention, yet that would be the legitimate or the illegitimate result of his action and preceedings. This is a fair inference from his speech at the Montreal dinner, when he appealed to the millitary chiefs who were about him as against the administration, and it is also a fair inference from his extraordinary course in send ing to Mr. Hughes, M. P., a member of the opposition, his explanation an justification of his course, instead of sending it to the Premier or some member of the administration. Undoubtedly, Earl Dundonald saw in Canada a great field for military labor, but there are thousands and tens of thousands of the Canadian people who even now feel that they are car ying a very heavy military burden, and who do not want to have it increased.

The fire was discovered about 7.45 o'clock, and before the alarm could be given smoke and flames were issuing from all sides of the could get water on the building it was jured.

So far as can be learned, the only person near the stable at the time Mr. Andrew Anderson, who was cleaning a carriage just outside the door. first noticed smoke issuing from building used for stabling country horses. which is connected with the main building. Mr. Robert Cameron, who is also employed about the stable, had just left for breakfast and had reached Main street, when he became aware of the fire, and at once returned to render what assistance Immediately upon discovering the fire Mr. Anderson made for the horses, which are kept on the second floor. He first closed the door at the foot of the stairs and opened the fire escape door. He then rushed up stairs to she stalls and unfastened Mr. Kinnear's handsome grey and started him down stairs, but the animal was panic-stricken by smoke and he was unable to get him to go down. The horse turned about and ran back into his stall. Mr. Anderson tried next the nearest horse, Mr. E. C. Cole's, and succeeded in getting him loose, but before he could get the animal out of the stall he was forced to flee to save his own life. Mr. Anderson says the scene in the stable was indescrible. The War.

The London Times' cables of last Thursday reported that the Port Arthur squadron would make no sortie, because the greater part of its guns had been taken ashore to arm thirty new forts erected since the siege began. General Stoessel was quite convinced that he could defend the fortress against Japanese assaults, and that therefore the squadron would not be under the necessity of going out to fight the ships of Togo.

Another interesting Times story is that in which the condition of the Baltic fleet is discussed. The Times' correspondent says that only one of the seven battleships now in various stages of construction at Baltic ship and dock yards could be sent to the Far East in August, and that several of the others will not be ready for the better part of two years. The Baltic fleet, like the terrible Cossack, seems to be for mantelshelf effect only.

A despatch of Friday from Seoul, says that the main Japanese squadron is being largely relieved from its active duties outside of Port Arthur. Admiral Togo is taking advantage of the opportunity to refit several of his ships, which are now in dockyards in Japan. He still has vessels enough to protect shipping in the straits of Corea. The recent appearance of the Russian warships there created surprise. The loss of transports was a great shock. It is uncertain who was to blame for the folly of allowing transports to sail unconvoyed or whether blame attaches to anybody. The correspondent is inclined to exonerate Admiral Togo, who, if he were consulted, probably opposed unnecessary risk. It may also be interesting news that after the reports of Togo and meaning. The Russian fleet was confused and it was impossible for it to retreat quickly into the harbor, on account of the narrowness of the channel, and possibly the low tide. At 10.30 p. m. the Russian fleet anchored in a single line extending from the foot of Wantsuing fort to the base of Chentorhon. During the night the torpedo flotillas kept up constant attack on the Russian fleet, going in eight times.

The most effective attack was of the sixteenth flotilla, which at 11.30 p. m. caught the Russians rounding Shenshen. The first class torpedo boat Shirrataka, commanded by Wakabashi, sent two torpedoes at a battleship of the Peresviet class. She was seen to sink in a volume of smoke.
