Who Was He?

On Sunday evening while the church ervices were being held, a man visited Mr. A. Snowball's residence, evidently for the purpose of interviewing the purse-girl who was in the house at the time with the biby only. The girl said she was first aware of his presence when she was up stairs. She looked over the stair rail and saw him in the hall below. She ran to the nursery with the baby and locked herself in. The fellow came to the nursery door and demanded that she open it. When she refused he tried to force it and failing, said he'd make her sorry. Then he went to Mr. and Mrs. Spowball's room and threw the bedding and clothing from a closet on the floor and treated another room in the similar manner. So far as the family could ascertain no further damage was done, or any thing stolen. The man entered the house Mr. and Mrs. and master Jack Hogan are by a cellar window it is said. At all events, he appears to have been somewhat familiar with the premises and possessed of could play his pranks.

He however differed from them in regard to the methods to be resorted to for bringing that desirable end about and he wanted to see the ratepayers consider the matter seriously and view of all the interests involved. no snap verdict. All had a right to their opinions and each should respect the other's opinions. He was delighted to see Mr. Winslow taking the stand he did to-night respecting the premier's attitude; "glad to see him with us," said Mr. Snowball, "and I anticipate that he will be supporting the. premier in the next election" (languter.) Continuing, Mr. Snowball said exemptions such as that sought by Mackenzie's resolution were generally given to encourage the establishing of new industries. This pulp mill had been encouraged in that way already, but it had failed. It was not the fault of any local conditions that it had done so, for the Miramichi men who worked in it had given good value for what was paid to them and he was sure that it was not on account of any excessive wages they received that the mill had been obliged to cease operations. A gentleman who had come here to make enquiries about the mill-one who had been in very many said that for position of the works, shipping facilities, superior quality of wood for pulp making purposes etc., Miramichi was an ideal place. The mill, it was true, was handicapped to some extent in its facilities for getting the wood to it, but that could be remedied, and there was no good reason why, if it was operated, it should not pay town taxes the same as other businesses Chatham did. No one was going to come here and pay $250,000 for the mill spend another $80,000 to $100,000 improvements without knowing he could make money out of it, and no such man going to be so niggardly as to try to get clear of some $2,000 in taxes. He (Mr. Snowball) was of those who desired to deal fairly by al!, but he felt that the backbone which was manifested by an endeavor to put its fair share of taxes on others was not the kind of the article that the town valued.

Mr. Nicol concluded by saying that the $50,000 valuation proposed would assist in lessening the Mill's school assessment, which must be paid in any case.

Mr. R. Murray raised the objection that the meeting was not properly called, as it was not done on the order of the Town Council, but by the Mayor alone, without such order; besides, the ratepayers present had not paid their taxes under the last assessment, so they could not legally vote on the recolution, because the law provided that such voting could only be done by ratepayers who had paid their taxes under the last assessment.

Mr. W. C. Winslow argued that the meeting was a legal one for the purposes for which it was called.

Mr. R. A. Lawlor agreed with Mr Murray. He read the law on the subject, showing that ratepayers only who had paid their last assessment could vote, and he said that although the assessment for the current year was made up, he would venture the assertion that not one man present had yet paid his taxes. A vote of this meeting for the resolution would, under the existing state of the law, not be worth anything. Hon. Mr. W. S. Loggie, M. P. P., referred to the canvas that if exemption were not given in Chatham the party who was negotiating to buy the mill might go to Newcastle or some other place where he could get it and invest his money, and said exemption had already been given for a term of years and he asked if there was any good reason by sixty cents per $100 since that time, | put forward why the property, having once been established here, should be longer mill exempted. He thought it was a fair pro position to establish a valuation of say one the town has not been entirely rained by half what was asked for the property for assessment purposes and give exemption to the rest. The value fixed upon it by those offering it for sale was $250,000 and, of course, the value of the lumber lands must be destucted from that to arrive at the real town valuation. Surely, the property having been so long exempted and now planted here, it was unfair to those engaged in her industries to again make it entirely free from taxation for the support of the town services. At all events, it was not fair to everdo the exemption business by

The pulp mill here had been exempted from taxation and the working men and other had to pay the more to make up for it, but it their own wages: nor was it the rate of wages the working men of Chatham received that caused the business to be a failure. The concern gave the working men $1 a day, and he thought, when they got men's labor at that rate it was exemption enough.

The chairman now put the amendments to the meeting in their order and both were voted down quite decisively, and the original esolution, moved by Colonel Mackenzie was as decisively carried, after which the meeting adjourned.

The Doukhobors.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: "It was a prave mistake to bring the Doukhobors to Cinada," declared Prince Uktomevy of St. Petersburg on his return from his visit to the settlement at Yorkton "They are not contented and never will be in this country. I find them more dissatisfied than they were in their home in Southern Russia. An evidence of their discontent is in their religious restlessness. Such pilgrimages as they have attempted here were never heard of in Russia.

"Your climate is hard on the Doukhobore. They are vegetarians and disdain to be called a cattle-breeding people. Their vegetables have not been growing well this year and they are discouraged. There can be no doubt that they were in better conditions and better climate in Southern Russia. They were accustomed to a long. het summer and will never get used to your short summer and very cold winter. "The Doukhobers are as industrious here as they were in their old homes. Some are already rich, but any amount of riches will never evercome their restlessness. This has been proven in the past and will prove so again. They are not desirable settlers for any new country. The tendency to bold themselves aloof from other settlers is very marked. The laws of common property in their community at Yerkton are much stricter than they ever were in Russia. "Oh, you Canadians will have your troubles with the Doukhebors yet," said the prince in conclusion. DIED
