BOMBPROOF FUEL ROOM.
Coal Stored in the Solid Rock at Gibraltar.
The storing of coal at Gibraltar is accomplished by means of a very curious plant, which has just been completed for the pumping station at Landport.
In the huge rock fortress the coal store, boiler house and the engine room adjoining are worked under compressed air, and are necessarily airtight. The store to which the coal has to be conveyed is hewn out of the solid rock, and is absolutely bombproof. A special feature is the arrangement of the coal plant in such a way that it does not interfere with the air pressure. The coal is lifted from the coal pit fifty-seven feet below the horizontal level. The skip by which the coal is conveyed is raised by means of a steel wire rope working over pulleys and round a driving drum. The time occupied by the skip in traveling from coal pit to coal store is two minutes. At this end and on a level with the store to which the coal is hewn out of the rock, where the man who controls the gearing for hoisting the skip is housed, and has practically a full view of all three operations.

A JOURNALIST'S STORY...

The editor strode up and down the length of his office, his hands thrust in his trouser pockets, his gaze on the carpet, and spoke as he walked.
"You write the real stuff, Mr. Johnson. The Derelict was good. It gripped. I've asked you to call because I should like you to give me more. Nine men out of ten, in telling the tale of a human failure, would do it in the stereotyped style of the penny newspaper reporter. You're the tenth. I have in my mind a series of articles dealing with the submerged types of this great city. What do you say?"
"What can I say," said the young man, gratefully, "except that I thank you for the opportunity and will do my best?"
"That's settled then," said the editor, staying in his promenade and regarding his visitor with a cheery smile. "I will give you a suggestion for the first article: 'A Night on the Embankment.'"

"Very good, sir; I will let you have it to-morrow," said the young man, taking up his hat.
The editor held out his hand. His keen eye noted the shiny coat, and his warm grasp evidenced his good-will.
"I'm down on your luck, my lad," he said. "The Derelict—your own story, perhaps?"
The journalist glanced down at his broken boots and his face flushed.
"To my shame, yes," he said. "It was like many another young fellow, I'm sure, who has been deceived by an act of folly. To-day, under an assumed name, I am a recruit to the army of grubbers. Your cheque meant food to me."
"So bad," said the editor. "Well, Nil desperandum, you see, my lad. Why, even I can remember the days when the cupboard was bare, editors callous, and the landlady voracious. I, too, I shall be proud to tell you that I discovered you. That girl, now, in the story—the girl who should have been your wife—how does the story bear your own?"
"Never!" cried the young man, dejectedly. "The day I fled to save myself from punishment I dropped out of her life. She could not marry a contemptible thief—and I was that."
"You never hear of her?" said the editor, turning to his desk.
"Indirectly, yes," returned the young man. "I know the past still lives for her. She is a writer too. One of her stories appeared in last week's 'Universe.' There is a note of sadness in it that tells me, who can read between the lines, she is not happy, and she thought it worth a word. But why should I trouble you? Forgive me!"
The editor passed his hand through his grizzled hair, and a queer smile illuminated his rugged face.
"I am a married man of twenty years with several olive branches," he observed. "But if I were in your shoes I should wipe out the stain and marry that girl. You can do good work, my lad. Do it, and I'll be right with you for the wedding bells. Good morning."
"He's a good man," he remarked to himself, when the door had closed. "Mustn't let him go to the dogs."
Whistling a stanza from a popular tune that had taken the town, he rapidly dashed off a couple of letters and, throwing down his pen, sat for a space with his chin in his hand.
"No, we won't let him go to the dogs!" he muttered, touching his bell.
"Get me last week's 'Universe,'" he said to the clerk who answered it. "Sharp!"
In a few moments it was in his hands.
"Ah, here we are. 'As we Forgive,' by Ella Joceline Rivers. He turns the handle of his desk-telephone and called a number.
"Hello!" he said. "That 'Universe' you put me through to Mr. Mayhew. Ah; that you, Charles? Morning! I was you to give me the address of Ella Joceline Rivers. I think I can place something in her way, if you would. Just a moment while I take it down. Now, right away. Thanks very much."
Taking a telegram-form he scribbled a message and sent it out to be despatched. This done, he settled down to a spell of work, unbroken until lunch-time.
At three o'clock precisely a clerk brought him a card.
"Show Miss Rivers up," he said.
He rose to his feet as the young lady entered the room, and advancing took her hand. "By George, she's pretty!" he thought. "As pretty as they made 'em if she'd only smile. I'll make her."
"Sit down, Miss Rivers," he said, cheerily. "I have read your story in the 'Universe,' and I should like you to do something for me. Can you?"
The girl looked nervously with her glove, and gazed at him for a mo-

About the House

The lunch basket initiates the domestic routine in thousands of homes every work day morning of the year, and is considered by the majority of housewives one of the most irksome duties demanded of labor, not on account of the labor involved, for that is insignificant, but because of the ever-present and perplexing question: "What shall I put into the basket that, while satisfying the desires of the appetite, will at the same time serve the individual needs of the body?" For the outdoor laborer who is constantly engaged in expending large amounts of heat and force energy, requires food containing a greater proportion of nitrogenous, that is to say, flesh-forming and strength-making properties, than he of sedentary habits, who needs rather food rich in phosphoric or nerve and brain-building elements.
Cold victuals at best are relished by few, consequently, when preparing to take a thing next to his stomach, should hardly be a second consideration. In the first place, provide a dainty basket—one having a cover is to be preferred—and keep it in a cool place. When only warm fill the cake box prepared, and before serving, warm again in oven, watching that it does not dry. Whip sweet cream stiff and with a large spoon arrange in fluffs on top of pudding.
Currants and Raspberry Dumplings—Make shortcake recipe, roll and cut into squares 5 inches. Add 1 egg, 1/2 cup sugar, 1/2 cup butter, 1/2 cup flour, 1/2 cup raisins, fold over the crust from point to point, having generously sprinkled with sugar. Rub a little butter across paste and bake in oven. Serve with following raspberry sauce: Beat 1 egg (white only) stiff; add 1 cup powdered sugar, 1 cup mashed berries, 1/2 cup sweet cream.

BLACKBERRY RECIPES.

Blackberry Dumplings—Sift 2 cups flour with 2 level teaspoons baking powder and 1/2 saltspoon salt. Beat 2 eggs very stiff with 2 level teaspoons butter and 2 tablespoons sugar. Add the flour to this mixture and beat to a smooth, thick batter, adding more flour if not thick enough. Roll in slightly oiled flour. Cut squares, fold over the crust from point to point, having generously sprinkled with sugar. Rub a little butter across paste and bake in oven. Serve with following raspberry sauce: Beat 1 egg (white only) stiff; add 1 cup powdered sugar, 1 cup mashed berries, 1/2 cup sweet cream.

STANLEY'S GREAT EXPLOIT.

Mark Twain's Humorous Reference to It.
Although the fame of Sir Henry M. Stanley, who died in London on May 10th, will rest on his exploration of the Congo and the discovery of Livingstone, it is his search for David Livingstone through the African jungles and his finding of the explorer, that has made his name so famous. It is his achievement, which is with Stanley and against Columbus.
"Columbus started out to discover America. He didn't need to do anything, all he had to do was to get on his ship, hold his grip and sail straight on, and America would discover itself. Here it was, baring its forehead to the world, and he couldn't get past it. He'd got to discover it."
"But Stanley started out to find Doctor Livingstone, who was scattered-scattered abroad, as you may say, over the length and breadth of the world. He had to get past it. He couldn't get past it. He'd got to discover it."

SELECTED RECIPES.

Tutti Frutti—This is made in a variety of fruit juices. Almost anything available may be used, and a number of juices mixed, sweetened with the juice licks. The same taste may be gained by grating the rinds or part of the lemons or oranges. If the lemonade is to stand this is better, as any lemonade made with the sliced lemons will soon turn bitter from the white skin, which gives a bitter flavor to anything. In putting in lemon or lime juice for picnic parties, or for keeping for future use, it is better to add some of the grated rinds. Be sure not to get the rinds, but the pulp. Do not use crushed bananas and add to either lemon or orange, and give an entirely distinct flavor. It would be well in using these to put through a fine sieve. The juice from cranberries is delicious, and will bear some reduction with water. Currant jelly may be dissolved, and this, too, makes a delicious drink. Black currant jelly is also used in this way, and may be used with either lemon or orange, and give an entirely distinct flavor. It would be well in using these to put through a fine sieve.
