THE CHAMPION THIEF.

The Vienna correspondent of the London Globe says: "Last week a certain Hungarian countess, well known for her riches and beauty (the same spirited lady who last year seconded her brother-in-law in a duel), placed with her presence the performance at the Opera, or summer theatre. On one of her fair fingers my lady wore two splendid diamond rings exactly like each other. During an entr'acte there presented himself in her box a big fellow in gorgeous livery—six feet of the finest flunkey imaginable. Quoth he, in finest Hungarian, 'My mistress, Princess P—, has sent me to beg of your ladyship the loan of one of your rings for five minutes. Her Highness has observed them from her box opposite, and is very anxious to examine one more closely, as she wishes to have one made after the pattern.' Without an instant's hesitation the Countess handed a ring to James, who bowed with respectful dignity and retired. The performance over, the two great ladies met on the staircase, and the Countess begged her friend to keep the ring at her convenience. 'What ring, my dear?' Denouement! Tableau! The powdered manial was no flunkey at all, but a thief, and the ring was gone. The police were informed of the impudent trick. Justice seemed to have overtaken the culprit in a very few strides, for next morning the Countess, whilst still in robe-de-chambre, received a letter informing her that the thief had been caught and the ring found on his person. 'Only,' added the note, 'the man stoutly denies the charge and declares the ring to be his own. To clear up all doubt, pray come at once to the police station or send the duplicate ring by bearer.' To draw the second ring from the finger and present it joyfully to the messenger—a fine fellow in full police uniform—together with a handsome tip for the glorious news was the work of a moment. Only when my lady an hour later betook herself radiant to the police station to recover her jewels, a slight mistake came to light. Well, my rings? I could not come myself the instant I got your letter.' What letter, madame? Denouement! Tableau N° 2. The thief had got them both.

MILTON REVIEWED.

A mining camp editor at Bodie recently received from a San Francisco bookseller a copy of Milton's "Paradise Lost." More new books to review, he sighed, taking out his tobacco knife and cutting the leaves. Thereupon he wrote the following paragraph: "We have just received a copy of John Milton's poems from the enterprising publishing house of X.X., San Francisco. The book opens with a long yarn, 'Paradise

The Star.

VOLUME IV. CHATHAM, N. B., OCT. 19, 1881. NO. 22.

Lost. He very improperly commences with a description of hell, and gives a thoroughly absurd pen portrait of the devil. This person he pictures as many rods in length, while the best authorities on the subject have likened him to a goat. He goes on then to tell of a fight with a band of gogols, wherein the devil, as a matter of course, gets the worst of it, being from the very start the under dog in the fight. This is quite enough for John Milton would do better to return to his legitimate newspaper sphere. He may be able to describe a masquerade ball or a street row, but in our opinion he is a very poor poet.

METEORIC SHOWERS.

Astronomers predict bright meteoric showers on the 18th, 19th and 20th inst. The best time to observe the phenomena will be between midnight and moon rising. In the east, after 9 o'clock in the evening, the planets Jupiter and Saturn will be conspicuous. Jupiter cannot fail to be recognized, for it is by far the most brilliant object in the sky except the moon. To the right of it and higher up from the horizon Saturn will be seen, fainter than Jupiter, but with no neighboring star to rival it in brightness. As these planets are now approaching opposition they are coming into the most favorable place for observation, giving us the whole night to study them at the time they are nearest us. The red spot which has been observed for several winters in the southern hemisphere of Jupiter still exists, seemingly unchanged, and bids fair to be a permanent marking. By watching its successive returns, any one with a small telescope may determine the time of rotation of Jupiter on its axis. It will be found to be about 9 hours and 55 minutes. Mars rises later, and toward dawn, Venus comes up very brilliantly above the horizon.

A MOUNTAIN HEROINE.

At one of the watering-towns, deep in the mountains, we stopped at a little cabin and, at the clatter of the mail bag on the loose planking of the low porch, there appeared at the door a most remarkable apparition—a woman, short of stature, and of wiry figure that spoke of long endurance. She had a pleasant sunburnt face crowned with a shock of hair, flying in a tangled freedom peculiarly its own. Her dress of faded calico, reached just below her knees, and left in plain view a well worn pair of high boots, from the same lot as her husband's. The woman was Mrs. McNulty, and, as the stage driver afterwards told us, was, in her was quite a heroine, and much respected through the mountains for her courage. The origin of her earliest claim to notoriety dates back some three years, in front of her house, on the stage road, is one of the most dangerous points of the mountain highway, where the road turns sharply, round a curve and crosses a narrow and unsteady bridge. Just above her house, late one afternoon, some break had occurred in the harness of the horses attached to the regular stage, which was coming down the mountain with city passengers. As the driver descended from his box to repair the damage, the horses became frightened and started at a break-neck pace down the mountain.

The courageous little woman, listening at her cabin door for the evening mail, saw as the coach rushed in sight, the danger which lay before the helpless passengers, and flinging herself before the running horses by her superhuman strength, brought them, trembling, to a halt. The poor woman bruised and wounded from being dragged by the running horses was carried fainting to her bed and lay there for weeks, suffering from more than womanly heroism. A purse was made up among the grateful passengers whose lives she had saved, and her name has grown to be a synonym through the mountains for bravery.—The Argonaut.

THE CONDENSED TROUSERS.

An editor in Chicago ordered a new pair of trousers from the tailor. In trying them on they proved to be several inches too long. It being late on Saturday night the tailor's shop was closed, and the editor took the trousers to his wife and asked her to cut them off and hem them over. The good lady, whose cucumber or melon had perhaps disagreed with her, brusquely refused. The same result followed an application to the wife's sister and the eldest daughter. But before bed-time the wife, relenting, took the pants, and cutting off six inches from the legs hemmed them nicely and restored them to the closet. Half an hour later the daughter, taken with compunction for her unfilial conduct, took the trousers, and cutting off six inches, hemmed and replaced them. Finally the sister-in-law felt the pangs of conscience, she too, performed a surgical operation on the garment. When the editor appeared at breakfast on Sunday the family thought a Highland chieftain had arrived, for the trousers reached only to the middle of his thighs.

Astronomers are on the lookout for a mysterious star known as the "Pilgrim," the light of which comes within the range of earthly observation only at intervals of about 309 years. At the last appearance of this star, which happened in the year 1672, it was brighter than Jupiter. "Such was its brilliancy," wrote a chronicler of the time, "that persons were able to detect it at noon in a clear sky, and at night when the sky was so overcast as to hide all the other stars." The "Scientific American" is authority for the statement that, if the "Pilgrim" appears, it will probably be visible for several weeks in the constellation of Cassiopeia. This constellation is situated in the northern position of the heavens, on the opposite side of the pole from the Great Bear. The latter constellation probably the best known of all is the one which contains the familiar "Dipper." There is believed to be no truth in the rumor that rival theatrical managers are endeavoring to outbid each other for the purpose of securing the new star.

Mothers! Mothers! Mothers!!!

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the excruciating pain of cutting teeth? If so, go at once and get a bottle of Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, there is no mistake about it. There is not a mother on earth who has ever used it, who will not tell you at once that it will regulate the bowels, give rest to the mother, and relief and health to the child, operating like magic. It is perfectly safe in all cases, and pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and most eminent physicians in the United States.
