THE SECTIONAL CRY.

[Mail.]

An apology is due to our readers for devoting so much attention to the wild utterances of Sir Richard Cartwright. The only one we can give, however, is that the temptation is too strong for us. There is an em. barras de richesses in the gallant knight's speeches to which no amount of patient attention can do justice. He touches all subjects, and impartiality muddles them all. Having taken his cue from the organ, Sir Richard has discovered that it is in order to raise the sectional alarm. Unfortunately as usual, he manages to select the worst possible time for doing it. His leader has commenced his martial progress, or rather parade—for he refuses to encounter a foe—in the Maritime Provinces. Down there they are somewhat jealous of Ontario, and nothing will irritate them more than a perusal of this Cobourg deliverance. It seems to be the fate of the Opposition to set the different members of the Confederation by the ears, and certainly if its leaders think they can make anything by so dishonourable a game, by all means let them pursue it.

Sir Richard Cartwright, who culls all his points at second-hand, inveighs against alleged injustice done to Ontario. The purpose of this declamatory rhetoric is not far to seek. There is no real hope of gaining any of the other provinces, with the possible exception of New Brunswick. Manitoba and British Columbia are clean out of the question; therefore it is safe to attack them. They have more representatives, it appears, in proportion to population than they are entitled to. He is opposed to the policy which gives five or six members to British Columbia, and four to Manitoba, besides, it does an injustice to Ontario, which has only eighty-eight, and will soon have an increase equal to either of the straggling Western provinces. The maudlin sympathy with the unfortunate people of Ontario is too transparent in its character to deceive anyone. We are quite able to take care of ourselves, and are strong enough in the House, and out of it, to assert the position to which wealth and population entitle us. Everybody knows that, and the Globe and its financial proteges know that full well. The whole sectional business—an old trick of the party—is a very scurv one, and will not serve their turn either in Ontario or elsewhere.

Of course the everlasting question of territory crops up again, and the intolerable wrong inflicted upon Ontario by saving her the expense of managing lands which may or may not belong to her is again brought forward. For some years to come it would take half a dozen Streams and River bills to keep exchequer satisfactory, and the people are in no hurry to be saddled with fresh and unknown liabilities. Sir Richard, we see, has also been caught by the disallowance craze. By the way, was he, or was he not, Finance Minister in a Government which in 1875 allowed a bill only because it had been altered to suit his colleague, Mr. Blake, and in 1876 disallowed another because it was retrospective, interfered with under litigation, and so on—both being within provincial jurisdiction? If so, where is the injustice in the present case? People who live in glass houses—especially those who set the example of erecting them—should not throw stones. Palpably the sectional cry is not merely a sin against the federal pact, but a grievous mistake at the present time.

THE IRISH LAND COURT.

The World's London special says: As the success or failure of the Land Bill turns altogether upon the Land Court, in which the entire machinery of the Act will be vested, great interest is felt in the probable composition of that tribunal. A court of landlords, however liberal, would destroy public confidence in the Bill, while on the other hand if the extraordinary powers created by the Bill should be placed in the hands of men notorious for their leanings toward the popular side, the landlords would at once set themselves to defeat the measure and the result might be fraught with peril, not only to the Bill itself but to the peace of the country. It is said today on pretty good authority that the three members of the court will be Lord Monck, Mr. Justice Barry and Mr. William Shaw, M. P. for the county Cork. If this report is true the choice of the Government will assure the efficient working of the measure and command the confidence of landlord and tenant alike. Lord Monck (best known to Americans as Governor General of Canada from 1861) has large experience in dealing with the land question as one of the Irish Church Commutation Fund Commissioners. He is a poor peer, and has had to work hard to support his family and his sisters, two of whom are afflicted with blindness; but probably no man in his station in Ireland enjoys the respect and esteem of the general public in a greater degree than Lord Monck. Mr. Justice Barry is also an extremely popular man as an Irish judge. He is a Limerick man, and obtained an intimate knowledge of the land question while he went on Munster circuit and as Solicitor-General and Attorney-General for Ireland in 1869-'70. He represented Dunbar in the House of Commons for four years, and was considered the best authority in the three kingdoms, next to the late Chief-Justice Whiteside and Mr. Butt, upon the Irish system of land tenure. Mr. Shaw, of Cork (who hesitates about accepting the position), has long been identified with the land question as an earnest and consistent champion of fixity, tenure and compensation for disturbance. His letters, pamphlets and speeches upon the subject have been of inestimable value to Mr. Gladstone in perfecting the Land Bill. Mr. Shaw is a man of large means, being a considerable landowner and Chairman of the Munster Bank. The Land Court or Land Commission as it is termed in the Bill, is the appellate court to which landlords and tenants may appeal from the decisions of the Civil Bill Courts, and it possesses very extensive powers to help tenants to buy their holdings by advances up to three-quarters of the price, and by purchasing estates and reselling to tenants. (A later despatch states that Mr. Shaw declines, owing to pressure of private business, serving in the Court under any circumstances.)

THREE OF THEM.

"Get thee an ape and trudge the land, The leader of a juggler band." --Scott.

It appears, that fearing he would be literally sandwiched between Sir Charles Tupper and Sir Leonard Tilley, Mr. Blake has persuaded Mr. Huntington and Mr. Laurier to undertake the journey to the Lower Provinces with him. The satire of circumstances could hardly go further. The people of the Lower Provinces are noted for a sense of humour, and will enjoy this novel spectacle immensely. They will at first be a little puzzled to know whether it is a Great Moral Show, like Artemus Ward's or whether it is simply a comic exhibition of politicians out of office and wanting to get in again; but whether they look at it from the moral or the political standpoint, the fun will be just the same. "There's Rose-mary, that's for remembrance!"—there's Huntington, that's for industry, and public purity, and courage and independence! The Lower Province people will remember that it was Mr. Huntington who was chosen to fling the Chinese weapon of the Pacific slander, and that when his pretentious veracity was put to the test of an oath, he vehemently shirked a oath, too trying or deal—a little grain of conscience made him cautious. There's Laurier, that's for intellect and originality and success as a Minister! The people of the Lower Provinces will remember that this namby-pamby young statesman was the most conspicuous failure that ever adorned the Grit Ministerial benches during those five eventful years.

What a happy combination—what a sweetly pretty picture—what a sight for gods and men, this new travelling troupe is, to be sure! The Vokes family are not a circumstance to them. If the admission is, as at Montreal, by ticket, the expenses of the tour may readily be recouped. There is nothing on the road that can beat them. It is not every day, or every year, that any portion of the people of Canada can have the satisfaction of beholding at once the pomposity of Pecksniff, the gay larkiness of Mr. Winkle and the sentimental tears of Job Trotter, all exhibited in one singular and unprecedented combination by the three "leading" (but not "fighting") politicians.—Ex.

A NIAGARA FALLS MYSTERY.

PROSPECT HOUSE NIAGARA FALLS, July 12—Today the body of an unknown woman was found floating in the river, just below the American Falls, by Guide Conroy. It has the appearance of being that of a dark complexioned young lady about twenty years of age, finely formed, with a beautifully long dark head of hair. It was nearly destitute of clothing except an under-garment, a pair of red stockings and garters, and a pair of low cut shoes. A plain gold ring encircled the third finger of the left hand. The body was in perfect preservation. It had not been long in the water, and had only received a few slight bruises. It is hardly possible it had come over the falls, as no body has yet been found that had come over either falls but was more or less badly mangled by the rocks and the heavy weight of water falling upon it. Still there is no ground for believing that it got into the water from the bank below, consequently the case remains a mystery. The body is in the hands of the authorities, and an inquest will be held tomorrow.

Profit, $1,200.

"To sum it up, six long years of bed-ridden sickness, costing $200 per year, total $1,200—all of this expense was taken by three bottles of Hop Bitters, taken by my wife. She has done her own housework for a year since, without the loss of a day, and I want everybody to know it, for their benefit.—N. E. FARMER.

Restored to Health and Strength.

From Hon. W. Jones, of Vermont. "I have been troubled from my boyhood with chronic or hereditary lung complaint. Some years since, early in the Winter, I took cold, which as usual settled into a severe cough, which continued to increase as the season advanced, although I made use of all the cough remedies I had knowledge of. My family physician also prescribed for me, but I experienced no relief. During all this time I was gradually running down, losing flesh and strength, until my friends as well as myself became very much alarmed, thinking I should waste away into consumption. While in Boston, during the spring following I was induced to try Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry. After one day's trial I was sensible that it was relieving me. In ten days time my cough had entirely ceased, and I was soon restored to health and strength. I have ever since kept this Balsam in my house, and whenever it is in my family has a cough or cold, it is immediately restored to. No family should be without it." 50 cents and $1 a bottle. Sold by all druggists.

Loss of Appetite in Children

From Chas. H. Colgate, Manufacturer of Flavoring Extracts, 21 Blackstone street, Boston. "Last spring my little daughter, aged five became very much emaciated with loss of appetite and great prostration of strength, so much so that we were obliged to take her out of school. This continued through the summer and caused us much anxiety. After trying various remedies without deriving any benefit, our family physician recommended the use of PERUVIAN SYRUP. After using it one week we saw a marked improvement in the child's condition, and in a month she was rapidly gaining in health and strength, her appetite being excellent. At this date she is perfectly well, with round plump cheeks and healthy color, and is again attending school regularly. I consider her restoration to health entirely due to the PERUVIAN SYRUP, and feel that I cannot too highly recommend it as a tonic." Druggists sell PERUVIAN SYRUP.
