EXHIBITION OF NERVE.

Barnard Koehler and Fritz Hisgen, two house painters, began painting a large house at Betts street and Central avenue N. Y. Three o'clock in the afternoon found them close up under the eaves of the house and sixty-five feet from the ground. They had just finished the surface within reach, and had started to lower the scaffold a few feet. When the required distance had been reached Hisgen called to his partner to hang on to the rope until he (Hisgen) tied his own, when he would come over and perform a like service for him. Hisgen had just completed his own knot when Koehler cried out: "Come over quick, I can't hold it." Hisgen, as quickly as possible, started across the aerial bridge, but had not gone two steps when he saw the man let go his hold and felt the ladder give way beneath his feet. As he began the fall, in the energy of desperation he, with both hands, grasped the almost smooth top of the fourth-story window cornice and there hung in the air, a distance of sixty feet from the pavement. He then gave an exhibition of nerve that terrified every one who saw it. Placing the toe of one foot against the window frame he gave his body a slight pendulum motion away from the house. A second push gave him a better impetus, and as he swung on the return toward the window he released his hold and went crashing through the glass safely to the floor of the fourth story room, from whence he immediately looked out through the aperture he had made to see what had become of his companion Koehler had not been quite so fortunate. As he went shooting through the air he caught the hanging rope with both hands and lessened his speed all the way down at the expense of all the cuticle of his palms, which was burnt off by the friction. He landed in a sitting position on the sidewalk, and was taken to the hospital with a pair of very sore hips.

FOUND DEAD IN THE WOODS

The following is from Ottawa, the 2nd inst: some time ago a drover named McHugh mysteriously disappeared from an hotel he was staying at in this vicinity. He left the hotel on a cold stormy night at the end of January, walking in the direction of the woods adjoining the hostelry. He was not heard of afterwards until today, when intelligence reached the city that his body had been found in Nelson's woods, at Bearbrook, in the township of Cumberland, eighteen miles from the city. It is thought the unfortunate man was suffering from delirium tremens at the time of his disappearance, and that he walked on until he became exhausted.

KILLED BY HER LOVER.

(Herald.)

At an early hour Saturday 30th ult., in Lancaster, Pa., at Coyle's ferry, on the Susquehanna River, opposite Marietta, was the scene of a murder and attempted suicide which caused quite an excitement. A young woman named Emma Myers, aged about twenty years, who has been living in the family of John Coyle, a well to do farmer, as a domestic, was found dead in the stable with a pistol shot in her breast. Her murderer is John Coyle, Jr., son of the man with whom the young girl lived. For some time Coyle has been desperately in love with the girl and has several times asked her to marry him and had been as often refused to accept him as her lover, and has several times told him that he should stop annoying her. This had the effect of maddening him with jealous feeling, and he threatened that unless she married him there would be trouble. To this, however, no attention was paid; as it was considered an idle threat. The sequel, however, proved otherwise. At an hour this morning Emma went to the stable, as usual, to milk the cows. She was followed by young Coyle, and after they had been in the stable a short time several pistol shots were heard by the other members of the family. The mother of Coyle started for the stable, and on her way met him coming toward the house, with blood streaming from his face. In reply to his mother's questions as to what was the matter, "Oh, I shot Em and myself. She is lying dead out in the cow stable." Her body was found, as he had said, in one of the stalls where she had been milking. The dead body will removed to the house and medical aid summoned. The pistol with which he had fired the fatal shot was found in the stable. The ball entered the left breast, and passing through the body had caused instant death. Both of the girl's parents are dead, consequently Coyle will take care of the remains.

NEGLECTED MUSCLE.

(N. Y. Herald.)

Because thousands of spectators flock to the boat races, ball matches and other athletic diversions that a few spirited fellows indulge in every holiday, there is a general impression that muscle is held in high esteem by the present generation. The truth is that for every man who takes part in the games there are a score of spectators who never willingly indulge in any exercise more violent than that of cigarette sucking, and among the remainder there are not many who can see that athletic sport is good for anything unless it enables a man to outdo somebody else and get his name into the newspapers. The idea to cultivating and maintaining the muscle because it deserves good treatment and because it richly repays its owner for all that is done, is one that seldom gets fairly into the American mind. Most of men of good physique have either their parents or their daily work to thank for it; not anything that they themselves have intentionally done for the purpose of securing a sound body. It is not the easiest thing in the world to obtain general physical training, for gymnasiums are few and men competent to manage them are fewer; but any man can devise some exercise for unused muscles that will be a great improvement on nothing. Merely to swing the arms, bend the back or go through the motions of fencing or boxing for a quarter of an hour every day would make any listless young fellow far better company to himself than ever before, and it might prevent him being as much of a bore to other people as listless fellows usually are.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The abolition of primogeniture has had the greatest effect, within the present century, in emptying the chateaux and castles in France. Fortunes have so often been divided down that there are fewer great incomes than there were among the French aristocracy. It thus happens that a French nobleman who inhabits a chateau may only have furnished one nook of it, and his roomy stables may have only one or two horses at the stalls. To withstand the effects of the abolition of primogeniture, many French families agree to enjoy their revenue in common. But full chateaux, with several generations of relatives in them, even under the methodical life of Frenchmen, may not be permanently successful.

The Profit on Cinchona planting in Ceylon has hitherto been estimated at seventy to eighty percent, but the plantations of the Government in India, and the immense and thriving cinchona groves at La Paz, Bolivia, will soon be sufficiently advanced to come into competition with them. The cultivation of the cinchona in this, its original home, is easy. The chief danger is from drought or and during the first two years, and the only labor necessary is to keep the young plants free from weeds. To give shades to the seeding plants, bananas are planted between them.

A VESSEL STRUCK BY A SWORDFISH.

A most extraordinary occurrence has lately been brought to light on board the Liverpool barque "Junak," Capt. M. Woodhouse, lying in the Brunswick Graving Dock, Liperpool, where she had been docked to be recoppered. Upon examining the vessel's bottom when the water was run off, a large rupture was noticed in the copper, which on closer examination was found to have been caused by the sword or spear of a large sea monster. It must have struck the ship with a terrible force, as it is deeply imbedded in her timbers, under the counter and abaft the waist, where it has pentrated through wood of Italian oak to an unknown depth. This encounter of the ship and gigantic fish must have occured in the Indian Ocean, for one evening, about eight o'clock, whilst about the latitude of the island of Mauritius, an unexplained shock roused every one.

FISHERY DISPUTE.

The fishery dispute is not it appears, finally settled by the payment of the large sum in compensation of the fishermen but merely the Fortune Bay affair. Negotiations are to be immediately entered upon at London to determine the construction of the fishery articles of the treaty. It seems to us a pity that the Earl of Granville consented to re-consider this part of the question. It was right that the illegal action of the Newfoundland fishermen should be atoned for, but there appears to be no room to dispute that the intention of the treaty was to give the American fishermen the same privileges and no greater than are enjoyed by Newfoundland and Canadian fishermen. Of course, the treaty stipulations may be construed into meaning anything or nothing, and it is to be allowed the chance of construing them to suit its own interests. The Premier of Newfoundland is in London and will defend the interests of the colony, and we suppose that Canada will be represented by Sir Alexander Galt, who is thoroughly conversant with the fishery question—perhaps by Sir John himself, as he is now in London, and we are told not seriously ill. It would be to the advantage of Canada if her counsel at the late Halifax arbitration were present.—Exchange.

BretHarte in one of his charming sketches tells of of a school-mistress who was acustomed to take long waiks in the pine woods of California for the benefit of the Balsamic air. There is more in this treatment than most people will be inclined to credit. We see the pines and spruces have been brought into requisition in the cause of medical progress. GRAY'S SYRUP OF RED SPRUCE GUM—a thoroughly scientific preparation—provides this treatment in a concentrated form, and has, after twenty years test, proved itself the most satisfactory cure extant for Coughs Colds, Lung and Throat affections.
