The Crater of Vesuvius.

A correspondent of the Illustrated London News writes: "Vesuvius having been for a long time in a disturbed condition, and the reports of an eruption growing more and more exciting, I determined to pay a visit to the mountain, and see in what condition it really was. It is perhaps, almost needless to say that I found everything had been very much exaggerated. This, indeed, I had expected; for anyone who knows where the observatory is placed, and how Professor Palmieri stayed there, unmoved by the terrible eruption of 1872, will find it difficult to believe that he would now spend his time in building a dyke round his observatory, as the telegrams reported. Still the visit was not unsatisfactory, for I was able to descend into the old crater, which would, of course, have been impossible in a great eruption, and to see the new cone of the small eruption which is actually going on. Leaving Naples with a friend, we drove up as far as what used to be the Hermitage, now deserted by the monks, who have been expelled even from that solitude by the Italian Government. Here we left our carriage at a small inn and took horses to the FOOT OF THE CONE, accompanied by a crowd of guides, who, however, soon tailed off, leaving us with the three who were chosen to go up with us! At the foot of the cone we were beset by as many more of them. My friend, after about fifty yards of ascent among the loose ashes, found it too fatiguing, and consented to be hauled up. This encouraged others of the loafers to follow us, in hopes of my doing the same; but, finding that it was a waste of time, they soon left us. The climbing is certainly tiring, like walking through loose sand on the seashore, with a stiff hill thrown in; but, with a little patience, one works one's way on. The crater was so filled with smoke that we determined to descend into it to see what was to be seen. Half-way down, when we got in sight of the new cone THROWING UP FLAMES AND SHOWERS OF RED HOT STONES, I confess to feeling rather nervous about continuing the descent; and I think it was excusable; but the guides say there was no need for alarm, and that other people were already down there, so we went on. The floor of the old crater has in the last few weeks risen a considerable height, and is still rising, for when we reached it there were two or three small streams of lava oozing out of cracks in it, and slowly flowing over the cooler blocks. These streams came out red hot, but soon turned to the dull lead color of the rest of the lava; only directly you stirred them up they became glowing like fused metal. The floor itself is full of cracks, showing the lava red hot at about a foot or two beneath the surface, and even where we stood you could not bear the heat on it long. At the upper end of the hollow is the new cone, which forced its way up suddenly, and keeps up a continuous shower of lumps of red-hot lava. The more violent explosions throw up to a height of a hundred feet or so, with a dull, smothered report; the lesser ones throw up the LIQUID FIRE SOME TWENTY OR THIRTY FEET, and as the pieces of lava fall on the side of the cone they turn black almost instantly, and help to raise the little hill in height. The cone is quite black, and about fifty feet high. One theory is that it will grow until it fills the present crater and take the place of the old cone, as the old one did that of the left-hand cone in the year 79, when Her- culaneum was destroyed. In front of the cone is a mass of rock which lately fell from the sides of the crater, through which the lava is expected to flow. At present it will have to rise above 20 feet before it reaches the gap, unless the side should crumble away under the great heat and pressure. The gap is on the side towards the hollow
