The day has passed when venemous order of council, is to be reduced from wiles can affect Mr. Mc. when the 50 to 30. rancorous tooth is powerless to wound. WE have to congratulate the Herald on the addition of Mr. Hanney to its ed. staff as Editor in Chief. This fact, and the natural desire to set matters right, are the apology we make to our readers A VICTORY FOR ROSS for saying now to the Herald that it is enough to make a dog laugh to hear its attempt to prove the word no one to mean more than one.

The sentence we shall quote again, hoping this time to force conviction through the thick head that yet has not received it:

" If Charnisay had any friends when living, none of them were to be found after his death."

Now, any one who knows the errors into which vulgar writers fall will see quite plainly that the word " them " in the sentence deceived Mr. Hanney. What Mr. Hanney tried to say here as: not one of his friends was to be found; but that he said were to be found argues, as we have said before, his ignorance of the first rule of syntax.

(For the Star.) Cows at Large.

MR. EDITOR,—There has been a great deal said with regard to allowing cows to run at large in the city, and laws passed to prohibit such a nuisance. Now, at the upper end of the city, there are a number of cows-whose owners are either unable to keep them as they should be kept, or else they are too mean to do it-that run about the streets as much as they please; and any person whose gate happens to be left open for a few moments, will soon be darkened by one of these nuisances. We understand there was a driver appointed by the City Council; if so, he should attend to his duty, or the present council ought to see into the matter. Now, the owner of one of these cows is a councillor, representing Wellington ward, and unless he keeps his cow at home after this, I shall furnish you his name. I now leave this matter to the public and the City Council to see to, hoping that the nuisance will be stop-
