The stand, whether they can curtail good sense of the House and the these expenses or not? After the country must see that it is their Government, in solemn conclave, duty now to assist the Government have met and said: We will lessen instead of barking after its heels the educational expenditure, Dr. like curs. Rand may rise and say, Gentlemen I'll not suffer this. If you make Russian Antocracy in our any change it must be one involving greater expenditure. ## The Debate.

We are sorry that we have not been enabled to give a brief at least of Mr. Blair's very elaborate speech of yesterday evening. We may just state, however, that the burthen of his address was a set of complicated c arges against the Government. He laid particular stress on the Chatham Branch matter, and attacked the Government for failing to ferret the matter out to the bottom. He spoke for nearly two hours, and made as good a ca e as could well be expected out of a bad one. But that the honorable gentleman's imagination is rather bad he likely would have put the Government as flat as a flounder.

After Mr. Blair took his seat the Attorney General arose. He was glad that the discussion had been of a searching nature, he said, for they had nothing to fear. He very justly pointed out the unreasonableness of Mr. Blair's charges against the Government in the Chatham Branch matter. He said the matter wore no immoral aspect; it was purely a legal question. was the peculiar province of the courts to deal with it, and that the courts would and were dealing with it should satisfy the Hon. gentleman. Beside this has not a motion of enquiry been allowed to pass through the house early in the session, giving the Hon. gentleman full opportunity to satisfy

Mr. Fraser spoke at much length and we will have the rest of his speech in our next.

Settling the Tobique.

The Telegraph says that:

"Messrs. Ganter, Cummings and Skinner, who are the party who wished to settle on the Tobique, have had interviews with the Attorney-General and Surveyor-General who will do all they can to facilitate the settlement. Ganter and Skinner go up river to erect a camp and commence clearing immediately. They can go on without makjoin them, as their project is heartily approved."- Telegraph.

This is what we want to hear of we wish to read of our Government doing something of practical utility. What say some of our destitute people from Fredericton, who can't make money enough to buy tobacco? Let them too see if they can't make a home for themselves in our forest wilds. Let them first show some earnestness, and it may be some aid will tollow

Mr. Wedderburn as a speaker has quite taken the House by surprise. It was little thought that the quiet Speaker of the past four Corner of Queen Street and years would take the foremost place among Parliamentarians; would develop such a keen and wide knowledge of the countries, finances, such glowing oratorical powers, and such scathing sarcasm. Gold is proven in the furnace.

Our Fredericion people have received the National Policy with much grace. -Fredericton Star.

"We should like to know whether ready to say grace after the National Policy dinner, as before."-Moncton

The proof of the pudding will will say no grace.

We have been obliged to hold over till next issue some editorial, local and other notes, which shall appear in our next.
