I was not long since on my way to Greenfield, Mass., when my attention was attracted by a little woman in the where I was sitting. She was apparently about fifty years of age (though in fact much older), of sandy complexion, regular features, pleasing, sprightly expression of countenance, short, neglige curls sprinkled with gray, plainly dressed in black, rather travel-worn, yet quick in movement and restlessly fidgeting, I thought, about the station where she wanted to stop, which proved to be South Deerfield.

With my accustomed politeness to the fair sex of whatever age or condition, as soon as I comprehended the cause of her perplexity I took my "Pathfinder," and leaning across the aisle said to her: "It is at South Deerfield that you wish to

"But," said I, "do you really expect to get possession of the property and actually recover the full amount?

"Greenings.

A youth living on Bagg street rolled an apple barrel to the curbstone the other afternoon, filled it with cobblestones, headed it up and marked the barrel "Greenings-handle carefully." The vouth retired to await further developments, and they soon came. A sawdust wagon came along, and the driver jumped down and took a long look at the barrel. He probably reasoned that it had been delivered by a grocer, and he doubtless wondered why it had not been rolled into the cellar. Dusk was coming on, and the man drove off. In a quarter of an hour he returned. "Greenings" were there yet, and he drove around the square, took the tail-board out of his wagon, and at length drove up close to the barrel. No one was in sight, and he made a dash for the prize. He probably expected a rather heavy lift, but when he felt the weight of those cobblestones his surprise must have been great. He gave one awful lurch, lifted the barrel about an inch, and as his fingers raked over the hoops he groaned in agony and leaped into his wagon as if a dog had been reaching for his coat-tails. At various times during the night vehicles were heard halting and driving suddenly away, but when day broke the "greenings" were still there, though only two hoops were left on the barrel.-Free

When are Women Most Lovely?

We have received from a young lady a question which is so interesting and invites our consideration of a theme so delicate and delightful, that we are fairly forced to answer it at length. This is what she writes:

Sir-Will you be kind enough to tell me. are young ladies considered more lovely, and thought preferable, at the ages of from eighteen to twenty-two, or from twenty-two to twenty-five or six? You will understand me; I mean, do men most admire them?

Before proceeding to our answer, let us thank our lovely friend for refraining from any attempt to bias our judgment by giving even a hint of her own age. She probably thought that if she did so, natural gallantry might lead us away from a cool, judicial view of the subject the types of maidenly beauty which ap-

Girls of eighteen may look on them as unsought old maids, and yet they are in their womanly prime, But soon the paper was taken off, and and may capture hearts which have been steeled against girlish fascinations. Oftentimes they make the best of wives, and men find a solace and companioncannot give. They have the advantage of experience, and they have learned the lessons taught by longer contact with the world, while still they may not be averse to falling in love.

No. we assure our fair friend, it is not that a woman is eighteen, or twentysix, or thirty, which makes her lovely in the eyes of men. She may be just as lovely at one age as the other; but inasmuch as most marriages of women occur between the ages she mentions, it is safe to assume that the majority of men prefer to take wives who are not older. But all men of taste and discernhappy here, and with our feet in the liness whether they show themselves in budding youth or riper maturity; and we will dare assert that if our correspondent was really charming at eighteen, she will be more so at twenty-six, or that if she is now lovely at eighteen, she ought to be lovelier at the greater

But let her give no further thought to the subject. The beauty that is unconscious is the most alluring, and loveliness which exercises its sway without apparent effort is sure to make the best conquest. This we say in full confidence that the multitude of weddings which are to take place in the period after Easter will confirm the truth of our words. Let us hope that before another return of this delightful season our fair correspondent will be selecting her bridal outfit, having found by happy personal experience that we have wisely answered her important question.—New York Sun.
