ARTIFICIAL SOMNAMBULISM.

How It May Be Induced, and Its Wonderful Results.

Mr. Richard A. Proctor contributes to the March Belgravia an article in which he shows how somnambulism may be artificially induced, and what wonderful things a person may be made to do while in that state. It is but little more than a quarter of a century ago that a couple of itinerant Americans, styling themselves "Professors of Electro-Biology," startled London by boldly asserting their power "to subjugate the most determined will, paralyze the strongest muscles, pervert the evidence of the senses, destroy the memory of even the most familiar things or of the most recent occurrences, induce obedience to any command, or make the individual believe himself transformed into anyone else." The secret of this wondrous influence was known only to themselves. As a part of the modus operandi, the subject was required to gaze steadily at a small disk of zinc and copper held in his hand, "so as to concentrate the electro-magnetic action." Whatever may have been thought of the pretensions of these men, their performances were certainly remarkable, and were witnessed by large and amazed audiences. In 1851, Dr. Braid, a Scotch surgeon, who had been making investigations somewhat akin to these matters, set to work to solve the mystery, and he soon proved that the phenomena were not due to any special qualities possessed by the disks of zinc and copper, but simply to the fixed look of the subject and the entire abstraction of his attention. Carrying his investigations still further, he found that, by modifying the method of fixing the attention, a far more perfect control might be obtained over the subject, and that a condition of somnambulism might be artificially induced. This state of artificial somnambulism was called by him hypnotism. It is produced by the subject keeping a fixed gaze nape of the neck. for several minutes consecutively on a bright object placed somewhat above and in front of the eyes, at so short a distance that the convergence of their axes upon it is accompanied with a sense of effort amounting to pain.

In hypnotism, as in ordinary somnambulism, the subject appears to be in a profound sleep. On awakening he has plaiting. no remembrance of anything that has occurred in the hypnotic condition, al- sometimes used to fill all the space on state the train of thought of the previous | breadths. one may be taken up and continued uninterruptedly. The hypnotized person be- heels and many straps across the instep, comes subject in an extraordinary degree to the influence of external suggestion directing the current of his thought and his action. He acquires the power of incredible concentration. "The whole man appears to be given to each perception." His passions may be aroused and his emotions controlled by words or through his muscular sense. His mind may be acted upon through impressions communicated from the body, and he may thus be made to act in accordance with the attitude or posture in which he is placed. "Double his fist," says Dr. Garth Wilkinson, "and pull up his arm, if you dare, for you will have the strength of your ribs rudely tested. Put him on his knees and clasp his hands; and the saints and devotees of the artists will men pale before the trueness of his devout actings." Dr. Carpenter mentions a case of which he was a witness. The arm of the somnambulist being brought into the position of striking a blow, the idea of fighting was at once aroused and put into immediate execution. The blow chanced to fall upon a second somnambulist, who was quick to defend himself against the unexpected attack. The two began to belabor each other with such energy that it was only with the greatest were calmed and put in a good humor. he will perform feats of strength and fifty pounds with one finger. Subsequently he declared that he was unable possibly move it. One of the most remarkable cases of this kind is that given by Dr. Carpenter, on the authority of trustworthy witnesses. A factory girl without musical cultivation, and unable tation of Jenny Lind's singing, rendering back-which must be fuller-has a yoke the songs of the great singer in different across the shoulders, to which the fulllanguages "so instantaneously and correctly, as to both words and music, that it was difficult to distinguish the two voices." There is empt anything of the sort. In like manner, by concentrating the whole attention upon a particular object, the sensibility of a hypnotized subject are pretty or child-like, yet they are the may be increased to an extraordinary degree. Not less remarkable are the instances in which the curative powers of hypnotism have been successfully experimented upon. It has been shown that the pulsations of the heart and the respiratory altered, both in quantity and quality. The cases which have been referred to. and which have been cited by the highest scientific authority, show that the most marvelous phenomena have been produced through artificial somnambulism. These phenomena, as explained by Dr. Carpenter, are due to "the entire engrossment of the mind with whatever may be for the time the object of its attention," and its passive receptivity for any notion that may be suggested to it.
