taxed, his clothing is taxed, and live as long as their tormentor. North America, save Newfound- we desire to say. land, have been drawn together by ties of union and become a unit with common interests and common aspirations. We are then a nation, to recognize no such folly as the interests of New Brunswick clashing with those of Ontario, and what builds up the North West. That were as silly as for the hand to cry out and say a sock and a boot keeps the foot warmer than a piece of kid does the hand. It is impossible to frame a policy,-a National Policy, -which can be ad apted to every nook and corner of the Dominion; while some portions are protected others must and will be cut in the cold.

And did the Telegraph not see this before the consolidation of the provinces took place? Oh no, he then saw but a dazzling future for the Dominion, and told us how a certain man on his death bed gave a number of rods tied fast together to his sons and said "Break." But they could not break them, and he told us they then unbound the easily. He deduced from this that "united we stand, divided we fall" "wherever there's union there's strength," and so on and so on Each day had some little homily, some little sermon like this.

But now we are having the effect of Confederation, and we shall just now, as it suits our purpose, grant that the effect of it is what the Telegraph says it is. We have grind. ing taxes; our flour and our meal, and our corn, and our oats, and our cheese, and our cloths, and our caps, and our boots and our shoes. are all taxed. But how dare the Telegraph cry out against these taxes? Did he not sit hatching on the egg of union till the bird was brought forth? Is not the National Policy a policy for the nation? Did not Mr. Elder cry out, O let us be a mighty nation great, and glorious and powerful? And did he think we could get along without a policy for that nation? How then has he the brass to denounce the "inexorable tyrant monster" the National Policy. Will he deny his own offspring? Base father. There is an annexation paper in St. John to whose lamentations we can welllisten, but in truth it does sour our stomach to hear Mr. Elder denounce the National Policy.

He thinks himself actually a wonderful character. The is a notorious character, but he does not know in tris low mind what kind of a no toriety that is. It is a notoriety on the principle that a certain animals presence, though unseen political pets. and hid from the eye of decency, is known from the fetid aroma that proceeds from it. A Good Joke.

Sir Albert Smith in recent encounters with Mr. Tillev, refers to the fact that were both fellow workers in curing Responsible Government. sponsible Government had been fought out and secured before either of these gentlemen had a seat in the Assembly Sir Albert in his subsequent opposition to Municipal Corporations did not show much love for it.

We laughed when we read the above "good joke," not at the joke, because we couldn't see any, but at the simplicity of the man who labelled it as such. There are a great many men in this community as there are in every other, who have mistaken their vocation. Looking at some of them in the distance, we infer that one was MR. W. E.
