 E. G. SCOVIL, Agent Pelee Wine Co.,
 Dear Sir:—My wife has been afflicted with nervous prostration for several years, using every kind of medicine recommended, but obtaining no relief until I procured some of your Pelee Wine, which I am delighted to say, has had the desired effect. It is the greatest tonic of the age, I think too much cannot be said in its praise and no house should be without it. We have recommended it to several suffering from a gripe debility, with like good results.

I am, yours gratefully,
JOHN C. CLOWS.

MONCTON
Woolen Mills,
SPRING 1898!

I have much pleasure in again informing my customers and the public generally that I have made an arrangement with J. A. Humphrey & Son for the handling of their goods for the coming season—west of the St. John River. My stock this season is large and personally selected with a view to your requirements which my dealings with you for the past three years enables me to do and will be sold at prices lower than former years—while the quality has been kept up to the regular standard—goods being made from pure wool; also new and attractive patterns added. I would ask you to see our goods and prices before purchasing and in so doing I feel assured that you will continue to favor me with your esteemed patronage which you have so generously done in the past.

Yours truly,
ALFRED P. SLIPP.

IN MEMORIAM.

Lives upon the death of George Morrow.
 On the twenty third of Christmas month, In eighteen ninety seven, The soul of poor George Morrow Winged its way to heaven.

Not after days of sickness, Nor yet by age o'er come; But in the very midst of life His soul embarked for Home.

He had gone in to Fredericton Upon that morning's train, To purchase things for Christmas, But he ne'er saw home again.

Returning by the way he came, To Ruisagornis Station, He set out with his lantern To reach his home's location.

The road by which he needs must go O'er lake and meadow ran; He oft had trod it, from a youth To a middle-aged man.

But little did he ever think When called this way to go, That the ice, he always thought a friend, Would prove his deadly foe.

A light, which had for many years To travellers been a guide, Was not in its accustomed place The night on which George died.

But another, somewhat farther down Sent forth its gleaming ray, And, thinking 'tis the old true guide, Poor Morrow lost his way.

A "dugway" had been cut, to join The Oromocto with French Lake, That light row-boats and canoes Might a connection make.

The dugway banks were high and steep; 'Tis thought he came too near, That his foot slipped and he was plunged Into the waters drear.

His arrival caused alarm; Some neighbors lent their aid, And in the dark and quiet night A thorough search was made.

And, by the footsteps, marked with mud, Seen by observant men, He had got out, but, wandering round, Had fallen in again.

The morning came; the eager men Still grappling might be seen; The corpse was found and taken home At ten o'clock, a. m.

His limbs, both frozen to the ice, His lantern, broken, bent, His rubbers, filled with mud, all tell The throes he underwent.

That Christmas there was without charm, 'Tis needless here to say; His one brother, grief-stricken, Could hardly speak all day.

Next day, within the silent tomb They laid poor George to rest, His body in the lap of earth, His head on Jesus' breast.

Let us rejoice that God hath said, "When through the waters chill I call on thee to wend thy way, Lo! I am with thee still!"

Thus in mid-life we are in death, Then let us have our way Be guided by a heavenly light That leads to endless day.

And when the sea gives up her dead The earth restores the slain, Our brother's form we'll see again 'Mongst those who praise the Lamb.

NETTIE WARD.

THE PESSIMIST.

Nothing to do but work,
 Nothing to eat but food,
 Nothing to wear but clothes,
 To keep one from being nude.

Nothing to breathe but air,
 Quick as a flash 'tis gone;
 Nowhere to fall but off,
 Nowhere to stand but on.

Nothing to sing but songs,
 Ah, well, alas, and alack!
 Nowhere to go but out,
 Nowhere to come but back.

Nothing to comb but hair,
 Nowhere to sleep but in bed,
 Nothing to weep but tears,
 Nothing to bury but dead.

Nothing to see but sights,
 Nothing to quench but thirst,
 Nothing to have but what we've got,
 Thus through life we are cursed.

Nothing to strike but a gait,
 Everything moves that goes;
 Nothing at all but common sense
 Can ever withstand these woes.

Mrs. Culchaw (to visitor)—You see I found it best to get a French maid for the baby. It is quite a fad you know.
 French maid (from adjoining room)—Roise yer jaw me jool, while I toy yer bonnet.

He (feeling his way)—I wish we were good friends enough for you to call me by my first name.
 She (helping him along)—Oh your last name is good enough for me.

How To Make Bad Butter.

Mrs. E. R. Wood tells, in the Jersey Bulletin, what she would do to make poor butter. What she would do agrees so well with what some people are doing, that we give it place in our columns. The lady says:

"I am not aware that I ever made any poor butter, and for nearly a score of years, butter, from my hands has brought 25 cents or more a pound, the year round, which is I think evidence of merit. However, were I to set out to make poor butter, the first thing I should do would be to let the milk (if set in pans) stand until it was covered with white spots, and the next would be to allow the cream to remain until it was a mass of fermentation, before churning. Then, if the thermometer showed above 70 degrees, when inserted in the cream, and the churn smelled decidedly cheesy, I should know I was on the right track. When the butter had "come" in a soft "squashy" mass, I would take it out of the churn, and make a feint at washing it with cold water, salt it, and after only getting out half the buttermilk, pack it away. There would be streaks and mottles caused by insufficiently incorporating the salt, the remaining buttermilk would soon become rancid (for what more quickly gets to smell "old" than buttermilk?), the mold spores in the cream (in other words the bacteria) would begin to get in their work, and I would have poor butter in a very short time."

Choosing A Location.

The nearer a poultry man can get to his adopted market, where he disposes of his fresh eggs, poultry, etc, the better for obvious reasons. But, on the other hand it is best to keep out of city limits, as in a small town or village land is much cheaper, taxes are lower, and there are less restrictions there than in the city. So get as near the city as you can without getting into it and have an eye to good easy roads connecting your plant with your market. Time is money, and it is expensive driving ten miles to market when five are all that should be necessary. Then as to site, highness and dryness are of principal importance. Cold is not nearly as bad and unhealthy for fowls as dampness, the fosterer of colds, lung troubles and roup. Build your houses if possible upon high and dry hills or knolls with sandy or gravelly soil and free, natural drainage.

A Model Sick Room.

In a model sick room described by a medical man there are two narrow beds of equal height on easy-rolling casters, having hair mattresses, low head boards, and are absolutely free from all abominations in the way of canopies. The patient may thus have a fresh bed for the night and another for the day. In the morning the freshly made bed covered with one sheet, can be trundled up to the bed which has been occupied during the night, and the patient can be easily slid on the same level on to a fresh bed. The mattress and bedding of the bed vacated can be rolled up, quietly taken into an adjoining room, where, with open windows, they can be shaken, thoroughly ventilated during the day, and made ready for the night.

An ingenious housekeeper in Brooklyn has applied the system of Pasteur to tomatoes and other fruits and vegetables. These are pared, washed in water which has been boiled, and then put into jars until the latter are almost solidly filled. They are covered by water up to within a quarter inch of the mouth and are then put in troughs of hot water and kept at a temperature of about 170 degrees for two hours. The jars are then sealed with waterproof paper. Treated in this manner they will keep unchanged for a long period and are almost indistinguishable at the end of six months from the fresh article. She has tried it upon tomatoes, little green peas, young lima beans, chili peppers, cantilflowers, brussels, sprouts, asparagus and apples.

People engaged in farm work deceive themselves very often by thinking that there is no need of regarding sanitary conditions so long as they have the pure air and fresh breezes of the country, and frequently people are found living in the midst of the most insanitary conditions and who wonder why they are not blessed with good sound health. Insanitary conditions are conducive to bacterial development, and nearly all diseases have their origin in germ life, and consequently sickness results, in many instances, where it is least expected.

Experiments recently made have shown that eggs are rendered highly unpalatable by being kept in brine, owing to the strong taste of salt imparted to them. Packing in bran, paper or wood ashes does not prevent their going bad, while a coating of paraffine, wax, isinglass, collodion or varnish has proved equally a failure. The only successful treatment appears to be to coat the eggs with vaseline and keep them in line water. By this means they can be kept perfectly good and without any trace of staleness for as long a period as 9 months.

When putting children to bed do not allow them to play in bed, as is frequently the custom, but instruct them that the bed is the place for sleep, and by this method they will close their eyes at once and soon be asleep.
